STEEG SUCCEEDS IN SOLVING CRISIS AS TWO OTHERS FAIL

Picks New Ministry From Center; Briand Retains Post

PARIS, Dec. 13. — Overcoming a political impasse with a threat of parliamentary dissolution. Senator Theodore Steeg succeeded today where two other men failed and formed a ministry.

He announced his projected government at 9:40 p. m. last night, bringing the ministerial crisis to an end nine days after the French senate voted Andre Tardieu's regime out of power.

M. Steeg found his solution to the knotty problem by leaning heavily on the moderate center of the French political arena, rather than seeking to reconcile rights and left, whose uncompromising warfare nullified all efforts of premier-designates Louis Barthou and Pierre Laval to set up a cabinet. Aristide Briand retained the portfolio of the foreign office, because of his outstanding reputation in regards to international affairs and his long service in that office, he has been more or less looked upon as a permanent holder of that portfolio.

The ministry of the interior was given to Georges Leygues, a left republican taken into the new cabinet as a compromise in place of Andre Tardieu.

Former Premier Paul Painleve accepted the post of air minister. M. Steeg, in addition to the premiership, followed the French custom of retaining an additional portfolio and choose that of the colonies.

Henry Cheron stepped into the office of vice-premier and minister of justice; Louis Barthou was designated minister of war; Camille Chautemps, minister of education; Louis Louchet, minister of commerce; Albert Sarraut, minister of the navy; victory Boret, minister of agriculture; Louis Germain-Martin, minister of finance.

The remaining posts were distributed as follows: M. Frinda, minister of labor; M. Queuille, minister of health; M. Danelou, minister of merchant marine; M. Thomey, minister of pensions; M. Daladier, minister of public works; and M. Bonnet, minister of posts. Maurice Palmade was appointed minister of the budget.

M. Germain-Martin, besides Briand, was the only hold-over from the Tardieu ministry.

Before the new government can function, however, a vote of confidence will have to be extracted from parliament.

CAPONE BROTHERS FACE COURT ACTION

CHICAGO, Dec. 13.—Trouble was in the offing today for the brothers Capone, Alphonse and Ralph, as federal authorities indicted the latter on a liquor charge and ordered "Scarface Al's" presence in court Monday on criminal contempt proceedings.

Should the gang leader fail to appear his $5,000 bond will be forfeited and he will automatically become a fugitive and can be arrested by federal agents in any part of the United States. If he appears Capone will be summoned before the federal grand jury for questioning as to his income tax. The gang leader is said to be in Miami, Fla., at present.

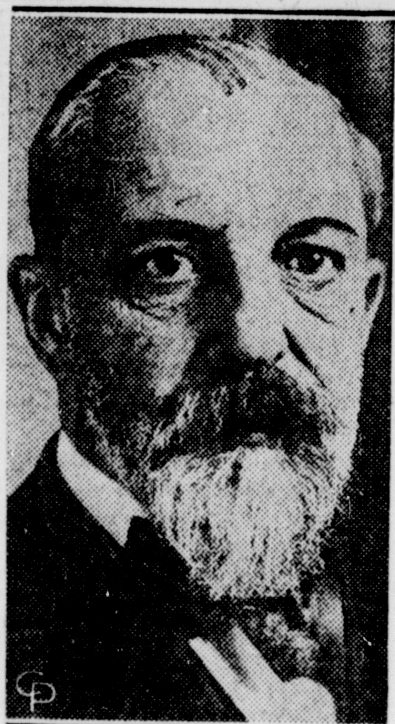

Ralph Capone and seventeen others, most of them Capone gangsters, were indicted and face arraignment for violation of the dry law.

ARMY TACKLES NAVY BEFORE HUGE CROWD TO ASSIST CHARITY

Colorful Spectacle Promised 80,000 Fans In New York

NEW YORK, Dec. 13.—Army and Navy's football eleven, whipped into a grim fighting pitch by a tremendous and unprecedented ballyhoo, will battle each other from pillar to post at Yankee Stadium this afternoon in a glamorous, post-season charity game that will draw the greatest "gate" in football history. The box office in-take will exceed $600,000, and may reach $750,000, and every dime of the proceeds will go to the unemployed.

It promises to be an epic struggle. It brings the Army and Navy together on the gridiron for the first time since 1927 when the two service schools of Uncle Sam broke relations. It is certain to be a clean, hardfought game for the players on both sides have been worked up to a higher surge of enthusiasm than for any other contest in which they participated during the regular season.

Fully 70,000 spectators—maybe close to 80,000—will view the spectacle. There will be present an inspiring audience, the uniformed cadets and midshipmen, major generals, admirals, business men, politicians, social registerites, movie actresses, the mayor of New York, the governors of nearby states, United States senators, sports luminaries and the dyed-in-the-wool football fans. Tickets have ranged in price up to $50 for a single ticket and the show promises to be worth the money.

Betting odds today favored Army at 8 to 5 to defeat the Navy. The rivalry between the two service teams dates back to 1899. Army has won fifteen games, the Navy has been victorious twelve times and three contests resulted in ties.

Army and Navy are both in fine physical and mental condition for this afternoon's fray. Major Ralph Sasse, the Army's head coach, said the team's morale is high. All of them have recovered from the mental strain which they have been under for the last fortnight undergoing their final examinations. Sasse said his problem was to keep the players relaxed.

"I'm making no predictions except that the Army will play to win," declared Major Sasse. Coach Bill Ingram of the Navy was inclined to be a trifle pessimistic but he could not conceal his pleasure over the morale of the team which is high following its smashing victory over Pennsylvania last Saturday.

"Navy shouldn't be rated on that Penn game, said Ingram. "Everything clicked for us in that contest. However, the Navy will be in there fighting this afternoon."

CRY-BABY BANDITS SLAIN FOR MURDER

OSSINING, N. Y., Dec. 13.—The three long island cry-baby bandits, looking too scared to cry, walked to their deaths in the chair at Sing Sing near midnight for the holdup killing of the druggist Charles Bauer in February.

The youths, James Butler, 20; Italo Ferdinand, 22, and James Bolger, 19, had won three reprieves from death so that authorities could hear the pleas of hundreds of mothers, ministers and others to commute their sentences to life imprisonment.

Hope for a last minute reprieve by Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt was denied.

HOUSE REPUBLICANS TO SUPPORT HOOVER LEGISLATIVE PLANS

Senate Will Remain Unreconciled In This Session

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—Republican leaders of the house today had decided to take a firm stand with President Hoover in a half dozen legislative quarrels now in the making.

Reconciliation between the White House and the senate is now regarded as impossible during the balance of the short session. The house and the Presidential veto power thus become the only weapons against a legislative program expected to be adopted by the senate.

The house still has an overwhelming Republican majority for the "lame duck" session, because the house elected last November does not begin to function until after March 4.

The program of Republican house leaders calls for:

Giving the President power to transfer appropriations in the $118,000,000 emergency public works bill from one department to another. The senate denied this power.

Appropriation of $30,000,000 for feed and seed loans to drought-stricken farmers and denying loans for food purchases. Senate provided $60,000,000 and permitted loans for food.

Cutting appropriations to prevent a deficit greater than already estimated by the treasury. House leaders claim the senate is extravagant.

Defeat of all proposals for increase in federal income taxes, including the LaFollette resolution.

All the so-called "radical" legislation for relief of present business situation, including direct appropriation to buy food in cities for the needy.

Compromise on Muscle Shoals, with insistence upon leasing of nitrate plants for making fertilizer and other chemicals.

The Republican "big three" of the house—Speaker Nicholas Longworth of Cincinnati, O. Rep. John Q. Tilson of Connecticut, floor leader, and Rep. Bertrand H. Snell, chairman of the rules committee—have finally swung into action.

Tilson and Rep. Wood (R) of Indiana, chairman of the appropriations committee, announced they will fight the senate to the limit to give Mr. Hoover power to transfer the emergency public works appropriation from one department to another. The senate deleted this provision on the ground that it is the business of congress to direct appropriations.

Longworth is standing by the house agriculture committee on its insistence that the seed and feed loan bill be held down to $30,000,000, or $5,000,000 more than recommended by Secretary of Agriculture Hyde.

House leaders apparently will make their fight to uphold the President at the risk of alienating some progressive whose votes may be needed in the organization of the next house. On the present alignment, the Republicans have 218 votes to 215 for the Democrats to control the house next year.

FOUR BANDITS OBTAIN $5,000 AT OHIO BANK

Central Ohio Police Seek Westerville Robbers

WESTERVILLE, O., Dec. 13.—Police throughout central Ohio joined authorities of Franklin County today in the search for four masked bandits who staged the daring daylight holdup and robbery at the Bank of Westerville, Friday and escaped with approximately $5,000.

Two of the gunmen covered customers and employees of the bank with the machine gun while another looted the cash drawers. The fourth banded guard the rear entrance of the bank. They escaped in three automobiles which headed for Worthington.

County officials believed that the robbers were from Columbus and the men were being sought there. Witnesses reported that James Newman and Jack Gilliam, former Ohio Penitentiary convicts were seen outside the bank shortly before the robbery. One of the automobiles in which the bandits made their escape was traced to Calvin Rutter, of Columbus, a son of Mrs. James Newman by a former marriage.

Rutter told police that he had been working all day and stated that he did not know who had his car.

Seven employees of the bank, including its president, H. T. Vance, were forced to kneel behind the cashier's cage and the customers were made to lie on the floor. The robbers ignored the main vault which was open.

One of the machines was trailed into Worthington by four Westerville men but was lost when a large truck blocked the pursuers at a street intersection.

Millionaire's Son Will Take Bride To Small Home

BOSTON, Dec. 13.—John J. Raskob, Jr., 23-year-old son of the millionaire chairman of the Democratic national committee, and his bride, who today were honeymooning on the Raskob private car "Skipaway" attached to the federal express enroute to Connecticut, Delaware, or Washington, planned to return after their honeymoon trip to make their home in a modest two rooms of a typical New England home at North Chelmsford.

The bride, the former Miss Minerva Aaronson, 19-year-old New Haven, Conn., stenographer, plans to learn the art of cooking under the tutelage of Mrs. Albert Shopherd, in whose home the newlyweds will live.

Following their quiet marriage in the rectory of St. John's Roman Catholic church at North Chelmsford, young Raskob and his bride first visited the fibre plant where he works. The plant is only a short distance from the Shopherd home, so the young groom each morning and night will walk to work and then home again.

On her marriage day the former stenographer received her first taste of how millions command attention. Her wedding supper was staged in the deluxe private car, served by a Japanese servant, and white capped chefs. Yet her every action was screened from the eager eyes of the many newspapermen and curious who gathered outside the railroad car to catch a glimpse of the newlyweds.

At the wedding supper were the parents of the young groom, Mr. and Mrs. Raskob, and the mother of the bride, Mrs. Elizabeth Aaronson.

TRUCE PREVAILING IN DISPUTE BETWEEN HOOVER AND PARTY

Peace Is Temporary; La Follette Act To Start Trouble

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—A temporary truce prevailed today between President Hoover and the Republican leaders of the senate, who are embittered and deeply resentful over the public dressing-down which Mr. Hoover handed them last Tuesday.

Mr. Hoover refrained from issuing any further statement criticizing congress for the manner in which it has dealt with his recommendations on economic legislation, although reports filled the capital that one was in the making. And for their part, the Republican leaders rest on their ultimatum to the White House that the President need expect no defense against Democratic attacks if he continued to issue such statements as last Tuesday's without consulting them.

The truce, however, is believed only temporary.

In all likelihood, the warfare between the President and the Republican leadership, by far the most dramatic and significant political development in months, will flare forth again next week when the senate comes to consideration of the LaFollette resolution.

There is political dynamite in the LaFollette resolution. It was introduced a few hours after Mr. Hoover issued his now famous statement that congress was "playing politics with human misery" and seeking to "raid the treasury" and it has been held off the floor ever since only by the almost superhuman efforts of administration leaders.

Open consideration of it, however, is only a question of time and there will be some savage debate over it.

The resolution says: "Whereas, millions of American citizens are in destitute circumstances due to unemployment and face privation and suffering, and

Whereas, the President of the United States, in public statement, has indicated that consideration for the interests of income taxpayers necessitates restriction on governmental relief measures necessary to aid the jobless and their dependents, now therefore,

"Be it resolved, that it is the sense of the senate of the United States that the relief of human suffering in this emergency would take precedence, over the consideration of the interests of wealthy income taxpayers.

Mr. Hoover's friends feel that this resolution is aimed directly at him, in a personal way, and they are determined to beat it. Yet they admit that the resolution is framed in such a way that a good many senators will hesitate to vote against it.

WHITE KEEPS HIS SELECTIONS SECRET

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 13.—Prohibit observers here today were completely baffled by a most unusual situation with regard to governor-elect George White's cabinet selections and other appointments.

Heretofore, tips from either the governor-elect or from persons in close touch with the newly-chosen executive permitted political observers a pretty good inkling as to the possible makeup of the new administration.

NEXT TAGS BLUE AND WHITE

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 13.—Ohio's 1932 automobile license plates will have a "midnight blue" background in combination with white letters. It was announced here today by Secretary of State Clarence J. Brown.

Two million tags have been ordered from the state tag manufacturing plant at Ohio penitentiary. The plates, which will be manufactured at a cost of ten cents per set, will require 1,300 tons of steel and about 8,000 gallons of paint.

Manufacture of the tags will begin about January 1.

DRIVE FOR LARGER SHARE OF GASOLINE TAX MONEY STARTED

Commissioners, Mail Carriers, Trustees Back Movement

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 13.—Members of the state associations of county commissioners, township trustees and clerks and rural letter carrier today prepared to carry their campaign for a larger share of the state gasoline tax fund for counties to the next Ohio legislature.

Decision to request the impending legislative session for a reapportionment of the gasoline tax money was made at a round table discussion here by representatives of legislative committees of the three organizations.

Existing law provides for the following distribution: to the state, 62 1/2 per cent; to municipalities, 17 1/2 per cent; to counties, 15 per cent; to townships, 5 per cent.

Claiming that this distribution does not provide sufficient funds to care for the programs of the counties and townships, the conferees decided to ask for a reapportionment so that the state will receive 50 per cent, the counties and municipalities 20 per cent each, and the townships 10 per cent.

Opposition was registered against the proposed mergers of county and city governments, establishment of county welfare departments and appointment of additional engineers in counties to guard against stream pollution.

DIES HERE FRIDAY

H. W. OWENS HARLEY W. OWENS, WELL-KNOWN XENIA ARCHITECT, IS DEAD

Succumbs To Heart Attack; In Business Here For Years

Harley W. Owens, 72, well-known Xenian and prominent here for years as an architect and builder died at his home at 40 W. Third St. at 7 o'clock Friday evening.

Death followed a heart attack which he suffered Tuesday evening, although he had been in ill health for more than a year. Although he rallied slightly at intervals during the last few days, his condition was grave from the first and members of his family were constantly at his bedside. Death was due to angina pectoris.

Because of his prominence here as an architect, contractor and planing mill owner for fifty years, Mr. Owens was widely known. Many buildings in Xenia and Greene County stand as monuments to his work, either as contractor or supervising architect. They include the Allen Bldg., downtown business block; the McKinley, Lincoln and Spring Hill schools, the Bijou Theater, the Masonic Temple remodeling and the temple annex, the Jefferson Twp. and Spring Valley consolidated schools and many other public buildings, besides numerous residential properties in Xenia, Dayton and Cincinnati.

He was born March 1, 1858 in Xenia Twp., the son of Alfred H. and Mary J. Eichelberger Owens. His grandfather, Thomas C. Owens, was a pioneer Greene Countyman, coming here from Virginia and for many years served Greene County as surveyor, recorder and county auditor. Alfred H. Owens was for many years assistant county surveyor and road superintendent and founded a contracting business which his son later carried on.

Mr. Owens attended the public schools and the old Xenia College, where he received the degree of master of arts in 1876. He extended his father's business later and for some time operated a planing mill and wood working shop at 333 S. Detroit St., in connection with his other enterprises. He had five children.

GOVERNMENT MOVES TO HALT REBELLION IN NORTHERN SPAIN

Premier Says Rebels Routed; Franco Is Reputed Leader

MADRID, Dec. 13.—Stringent measures to halt the spread of revolutionary flames, which spurted suddenly at the important fortified center of Jaca on the Franco-Spanish frontier yesterday, were called into force by the Spanish government today as reports alleged that rebellion prevailed in a large part of the country north of Madrid.

Dispatches filtering into Madrid this morning through a rigid censorship clamped on by Premier Berenguer's government asserted that rebel troops operated not only in the Jaca sector, but marched on Huesca, thirty-five miles to the south.

Simultaneously rumors circulated in Madrid that the garrison at Vigo, important seaport directly west of Jaca and a short distance north of the Portuguese frontier, had joined the revolutionary movement. With the district of Aragon also reported under rebel control, the entire northern part of Spain thus was linked with the uprisings.

Later in the day, following a long interview with King Alfonso, Premier Damaso Berenguer announced that the insurgent forces at Jaca were put to flight by strong detachments of loyal troops.

Government troops clashed with the rebels in Ayerbe pass between Jaca and Huesca, the premier announced, taking 100 prisoners and a large quantity of arms and ammunition. He said there were "some casualties."

"The rebels," he said, "are now beating a hasty and disorderly retreat towards Jaca."

"I personally believe the matter is entirely ended. The worst will come when we have to try the ring-leaders on charges of inciting rebellion."

Premier Berenguer insisted that the remainder of the country was quiet, but it was understood Republican agitators were urging all unions to declare a nation-wide general strike tomorrow.

Cognizant of the critical situation, Premier Berenguer summoned the council of ministers for an emergency night session, speedily assuring the public that the government was fully capable of handling the "local disturbance" at Jaca. It would admit to no other outbreaks, insisting that the Jaca affair was an isolated incident instigated by Lieut. Col. Julio Manzaneda.

The official communique issued by the minister of the interior at 2 a. m. stated that part of the garrison at Jaca had revolted, exchanging shots with the civil guards. The latter, it added, were forced to retire before the surprise onslaught, but later captured Jaca with the loss of five men and one sergeant.

Declaring the Aragon section under a state of war, the government ordered troops to march against the rebels at Jaca. The loyal military forces were rushed from

One of the automobiles in which the bandits made their escape was traced to Calvin Rutter, of Columbus, a son of Mrs. James Newman by a former marriage.

Rutter told police that he had been working all day and stated that he did not know who had his car.

Seven employees of the bank, including its president, H. T. Vance, were forced to kneel behind the cashier's cage and the customers were made to lie on the floor. The robbers ignored the main vault which was open.

One of the machines was trailed into Worthington by four Westerville men but was lost when a large truck blocked the pursuers at a street intersection.

STATE ENDS CASE MIDDLEBOURNE, W. Va., Dec. 13.—The state was expected to conclude its case today in the trial of James Dunn, one of four men charged with murder for the brutal slaying of 3-year-old Garland Bayles, as the long murder trial neared a close.

Several names have been tossed into the pile of possibilities, but none has received neither confirmation nor denial from the governor-elect or his confidants.

Before leaving Friday evening for Washington to attend the annual gridiron dinner given by Washington Newspaper correspondents, White said he expected to announce some of his cabinet appointments next week.

The governor's cabinet includes the following officials: finance director, commerce director, welfare director, highway director, health director, director of education, director of industrial relations, director of public works and director of agriculture.

Millionaire's Son Will Take Bride To Small Home

BOSTON, Dec. 13.—John J. Raskob, Jr., 23-year-old son of the millionaire chairman of the Democratic national committee, and his bride, who today were honeymooning on the Raskob private car "Skipaway" attached to the federal express enroute to Connecticut, Delaware, or Washington, planned to return after their honeymoon trip to make their home in a modest two rooms of a typical New England home at North Chelmsford.

The bride, the former Miss Minerva Aaronson, 19-year-old New Haven, Conn., stenographer, plans to learn the art of cooking under the tutelage of Mrs. Albert Shopherd, in whose home the newlyweds will live.

Following their quiet marriage in the rectory of St. John's Roman Catholic Church at North Chelmsford, young Raskob and his bride first visited the fibre plant where he works. The plant is only a short distance from the Shopherd home, so the young groom each morning and night will walk to work and then home again.

On her marriage day the former stenographer received her first taste of how millions command attention. Her wedding supper was staged in the deluxe private car, served by a Japanese servant, and white capped chefs. Yet her every action was screened from the eager eyes of the many newspapermen and curious who gathered outside the railroad car to catch a glimpse of the newlyweds.

At the wedding supper were the parents of the young groom, Mr. and Mrs. Raskob, and the mother of the bride, Mrs. Elizabeth Aaronson.

TRUCE PREVAILING IN DISPUTE BETWEEN HOOVER AND PARTY

Peace Is Temporary; La Follette Act To Start Trouble

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—A temporary truce prevailed today between President Hoover and the Republican leaders of the senate, who are embittered and deeply resentful over the public dressing-down which Mr. Hoover handed them last Tuesday.

Mr. Hoover refrained from issuing any further statement criticizing congress for the manner in which it has dealt with his recommendations on economic legislation, although reports filled the capital that one was in the making. And for their part, the Republican leaders rest on their ultimatum to the White House that the President need expect no defense against Democratic attacks if he continued to issue such statements as last Tuesday's without consulting them.

The truce, however, is believed only temporary.

In all likelihood, the warfare between the President and the Republican leadership, by far the most dramatic and significant political development in months, will flare forth again next week when the senate comes to consideration of the LaFollette resolution.

There is political dynamite in the LaFollette resolution. It was introduced a few hours after Mr. Hoover issued his now famous statement that congress was "playing politics with human misery" and seeking to "raid the treasury" and it has been held off the floor ever since only by the almost superhuman efforts of administration leaders.

Open consideration of it, however, is only a question of time and there will be some savage debate over it.

The resolution says: "Whereas, millions of American citizens are in destitute circumstances due to unemployment and face privation and suffering, and

"Whereas, the President of the United States, in a public statement, has indicated that consideration for the interests of income taxpayers necessitates restriction on governmental relief measures necessary to aid the jobless and their dependents, now therefore,

"Be it resolved, that it is the sense of the senate of the United States that the relief of human suffering in this emergency would take precedence, over the consideration of the interests of wealthy income taxpayers."

Mr. Hoover's friends feel that this resolution is aimed directly at him, in a personal way, and they are determined to beat it. Yet they admit that the resolution is framed in such a way that a good many may hesitate to vote against it.

ZIONISTS TO HOLD NEW YORK MEETING

NEW YORK, Dec. 13.—With messages of good will from Professor Einstein and Dr. Chaim Weizmann, president of the world Zionist organization, New York Zionists tonight will hold a demonstration "of Zionist sentiment and solidarity" in Madison Square Garden. A protest will be made at the meeting against great Britain's attitude toward the modern Zionist movement.

WHITE KEEPS HIS SELECTIONS SECRET

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 13.—Prohibition observers here today were completely baffled by a most unusual situation with regard to governor-elect George White's cabinet selections and other appointments.

Heretofore, tips from either the governor-elect or from persons in close touch with the newly-chosen executive permitted political observers a pretty good inkling as to the possible makeup of the new administration.

NEXT TAGS BLUE AND WHITE

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 13.—Ohio's 1932 automobile license plates will have a "midnight blue" background in combination with white letters. It was announced here today by Secretary of State Clarence J. Brown.

Two million tags have been ordered from the state tag manufacturing plant at Ohio penitentiary. The plates, which will be manufactured at a cost of ten cents per set, will require 1,300 tons of steel and about 8,000 gallons of paint.

Manufacture of the tags will begin about January 1.

DRIVE FOR LARGER SHARE OF GASOLINE TAX MONEY STARTED

Commissioners, Mail Carriers, Trustees Back Movement

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 13.—Members of the state associations of county commissioners, township trustees and clerks and rural letter carriers today prepared to carry their campaign for a larger share of the state gasoline tax fund for counties to the next Ohio legislature.

Decision to request the impending legislative session for a reapportionment of the gasoline tax money was made at a round table discussion here by representatives of legislative committees of the three organizations.

Existing law provides for the following distribution: to the state, 62 1/2 per cent; to municipalities, 17 1/2 per cent; to counties, 15 per cent; to townships, 5 per cent.

Claiming that this distribution does not provide sufficient funds to care for the programs of the counties and townships, the conferees decided to ask for a reapportionment so that the state will receive 50 per cent, the counties and municipalities 20 per cent each, and the townships 10 per cent.

Opposition was registered against the proposed merger of county and city governments, establishment of county welfare departments and appointment of additional engineers in counties to guard against stream pollution.

ARREST 68 DURING GAMBLING RAIDS

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., Dec. 13.—State and city police today continued their wholesale campaign against gambling establishments in this region following a series of raids on eight places during which sixty-eight men were arrested.

An elaborate loud-speaker system, used to broadcast racing results in scattered branches over the city, was uncovered during the raids.

All those arrested were released on bonds ranging from $100 to $1,000. Among those taken into custody were Albert "Dutch" Nazel, old-time baseball player who police say is chief of gambling operations in Huntington; Sam Feldman and Jap Guhl, all well-known in the tri-state district.

DIES HERE FRIDAY

H. W. OWENS, HARLEY W. OWENS, WELL-KNOWN XENIA ARCHITECT, IS DEAD

Succumbs To Heart Attack; In Business Here For Years

Harley W. Owens, 72, well-known Xenian and prominent here for years as an architect and builder died at his home at 40 W. Third St. at 7 o'clock Friday evening.

Death followed a heart attack which he suffered Tuesday evening, although he had been in ill health for more than a year. Although he rallied slightly at intervals during the last few days, his condition was grave from the first and members of his family were constantly at his bedside. Death was due to angina pectoris.

Because of his prominence here as an architect, contractor and planning mill owner for fifty years, Mr. Owens was widely known.

Many buildings in Xenia and Greene County stand as monuments to his work, either as contractor or supervising architect. They include the Allen Bldg., downtown business block; the McKinley, Lincoln and Spring Hill schools, the Bijou Theater, the Masonic Temple remodeling and the temple annex, the Jefferson Twp. and Spring Valley consolidated schools and many other public buildings, besides numerous residential properties in Xenia, Dayton and Cincinnati.

He was born March 1, 1858 in Xenia Twp., the son of Alfred H. and Mary J. Elcheberger Owens. His grandfather, Thomas C. Owens, was a pioneer Greene Countyman, coming here from Virginia and for many years served Greene County as surveyor, recorder and county auditor. Alfred H. Owens was for many years assistant county surveyor and road superintendent and founded a contracting business which his son later carried on.

Mr. Owens attended the public schools and the old Xenia College, where he received the degree of master of arts in 1876. He extended his father's business later and for some time operated a planing mill and wood working shop at 323 S. Detroit St., in connection with his other enterprises. He had five children.

JUDGE LINDSEY MAY FACE MORE SERIOUS CHARGE IS LEARNED

May Accuse Jurist Of Interrupting Church Service

NEW YORK, Dec. 13.—Judge Ben B. Lindsey of Denver, may face a different charge when he appears in court next Wednesday. It was intimated today. The former Colorado jurist was scheduled to be tried yesterday on disorderly charges arising from his joust with Bishop William T. Manning in the Cathedral of St. John the Divine last Sunday but the case was adjourned until next week.

A new complaint charging Lindsey with violating sections of the penal law making it a misdemeanor to interrupt a religious service may be drawn up.

Bishop Manning, who caused Lindsey to jump up in the Cathedral and demand to be heard after the bishop attacked companionate marriage, did not appear yesterday. He had Charles H. Tuttle, former United States district attorney, represent him in court. Manning will appear court next Wednesday as a witness.

If the new complaint is drawn, Lindsey would be subject to a $500 fine and year in prison, or both, in the event of conviction. The penalty for disorderly charges is a $50 fine and six months in jail, or both.

GOVERNMENT MOVES TO HALT REBELLION IN NORTHERN SPAIN

Premier Says Rebels Routed; Franco Is Reputed Leader

MADRID, Dec. 13.—Stringent measures to halt the spread of revolutionary flames, which spurted suddenly at the important fortified center of Jaca on the Franco-Spanish frontier yesterday, were called into force by the Spanish government today as reports alleged that rebellion prevailed in a large part of the country north of Madrid.

Dispatches filtering into Madrid this morning through a rigid censorship clamped on by Premier Berenguer's government asserted that rebel troops operated not only in the Jaca sector, but marched on Huesca, thirty-five miles to the south.

Simultaneously rumors circulated in Madrid that the garrison at Vigo, important seaport directly west of Jaca and a short distance north of the Portuguese frontier, had joined the revolutionary movement. With the district of Aragon also reported under rebel control, the entire northern part of Spain thus was inked with the uprisings.

Later in the day, following a long interview with King Alfonso, Premier Damaso Berenguer announced that the insurgent forces at Jaca were put to flight by strong detachments of loyal troops.

Government troops clashed with the rebels in Ayerbe pass between Jaca and Huesca, the premier announced, taking 100 prisoners and a large quantity of arms and munitions. He said there were "some casualties."

"The rebels," he said, "are now beating a hasty and disorderly retreat towards Jaca."

"I personally believe the matter is entirely ended. The worst will come when we have to try the ring-leaders on charges of inciting rebellion."

Premier Berenguer insisted that the remainder of the country was quiet, but it was understood Republican agitators were urging all unions to declare a nation-wide general strike tomorrow.

Cognizant of the critical situation, Premier Berenguer summoned the council of ministers for an emergency night session, speedily assuring the public that the government was fully capable of handling the "local disturbance" and that it would permit no other outbreaks, insisting that the Jaca affair was an isolated incident.

The official communique issued by the minister of the interior at 2 a. m. stated that part of the garrison at Jaca had revolted, exchanging shots with the civil guards. The latter, it added, were forced to retire before the surprise onslaught, but later captured Jaca with the loss of five men and one sergeant.

Declaring the Aragon section under a state of war, the government ordered troops to march against the rebels at Jaca. The loyal military forces were rushed from

MORE FAVORABLE PRICES FOR POULTRY IN SPRING PREDICTED

Next fall should be a good time to put pullets in the laying house, according to J. C. Neff, economist of Ohio State University, who discussed the poultry outlook at the two-day Greene County Poultry Institute at the Armory, Thursday and Friday. Mr. Neff said the present low prices of poultry and poultry products are forcing large numbers of laying stock on the market which will decrease the supply and make for more favorable prices, and also that less chicks will be raised next spring.

C. M. Ferguson, poultry specialist, said chickens are more susceptible to diseases than any other domestic animals and that the same care should be exercised as in the control of human diseases. He pointed out the enormous loss caused by internal parasites, namely, roundworms, coccidia and tapeworms and urged preventative measures be followed.

R. E. Gray of the poultry department of Ohio State University stressed the importance of selecting birds with high egg production. It was pointed out that the average egg production in Greene County was sixty eggs per bird, while 160 eggs per bird per year are necessary for a profit. Early maturity, lack of broodiness, persistency and intensity of production and absence of winter pause were mentioned as factors influencing egg production.

D. A. Palmer, Greenville, speaking of marketing problems, urged the necessity of producing quality products.

Ed Ginevan, local poultryman, describing the management of his farm, said they stressed economical production of quality products. Motion pictures taken by the U. S. department of agriculture were shown at each session. At several places in these pictures activities at the Townsley Hatchery in Xenia were shown.

A guessing contest was won by Mrs. Robert Thomas of Beaver Creek Twp., and George L. Bradley of Xenia won second prize. This contest consisted of guessing the number of eggs produced by two birds furnished by Ed Ginevan. Prizes were awarded by the Xenia Poultry Exchange and Townsley Hatchery.

Verdict in Belden Case is Sustained
The second district Court of Appeals, in a decision announced Saturday, affirmed the judgment of the jury in Common Pleas Court, which had awarded J. Belden to $10,000, $1,204.01 in his suit seeking to recover $4,021.88 less a credit of $75 from The Central Acceptance Corp., of which he was formerly local agent.

Belden sought to recover four different amounts on as many causes of action. The charge of the trial judge to the jury was the basis of the principal objection of the Central Acceptance Corp. in carrying the case to the appellate court on error, but the appellate court ruled the charge fairly presented the case to the jury for its consideration and that no error is apparent which would warrant a reviewing court in disturbing the lower court's judgment.

Marshall and Marshall were attorneys for the plaintiff in error and Miller and Finney represented the defendant in error.

AUTOIST IS FINED
Prosecuted on a charge of driving an auto not equipped with brakes, William Byrd, 22, colored, Xenia, was fined $25 and costs and remanded to jail for default of payment of the assessment by Municipal Judge E. ## INITIAL OFFERING OF WILBERFORCE U. PLAYERS SUCCEEDS

"Second Childhood," a farce in three acts, was presented by the Wilberforce University Players before an enthusiastic and appreciative audience in Galloway Hall auditorium on the university campus Friday night.

The play dealt with the amusing experiences of a college chemistry professor, who, believing that he has discovered a magic elixir of life, tries it out with mirth-provoking results, on the elderly suitor for his daughter's hand.

Histrionic honors went to Theodore Rowan, playing the part of the professor; William B. Williams, his young assistant, and to Florence Winbush, cast in the character of a maiden aunt, and sister of the professor.

The dramatic group was only recently organized under the direction of a faculty dramatic committee, headed by Professor Mack M. Greene of the department of physical education, and in its initial presentation furnished a highly creditable performance. James Trotman is president of the players.

Reports will be given by County Farm Bureau officers, extension workers, and district men of the nineteenth district which includes Fayette (Clinton), Montgomery and Greene Counties, Mrs. J. B. Mason, Wilmington Pike, will entertain with readings.

SISTER OF XENIAN REMOVED BY DEATH

Mrs. Clara Smith, 75, Wilmington, sister of Mrs. N. D. Miers, 250 Chestnut St., this city, died at her home Friday afternoon at 12:30 o'clock. She had suffered a slight stroke of paralysis five months ago from which she had never fully recovered. She suffered another stroke last Monday which was the direct cause of her death.

She had spent her entire life in Wilmington. Her husband, Reuben Smith, preceded her in death a number of years. Mrs. Smith is survived by six children; Frank Smith, Lower Bellbrook Pike, near Xenia; Mrs. Viola Ambers, Washington C. H.; Mrs. Ada Wilson, near Wilmington; Miss Alice Smith and Roy and William Smith, all at home. Besides her sister, Mrs. Miers, she is survived by two brothers, Charles and Eli Babb, both of Wilmington.

Funeral services will be held at the home Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock with burial in the Wilmington Cemetery.

MORE FAVORABLE PRICES FOR POULTRY IN SPRING PREDICTED

Next fall should be a good time to put pullets in the laying house, according to J. C. Neff, economist of Ohio State University, who discussed the poultry outlook at the two day Greene County Poultry Institute at the Armory Thursday and Friday. Mr. Neff said the present low prices of poultry and poultry products are forcing large numbers of laying stock on the market which will decrease the supply and make for more favorable prices, and also that less chicks will be raised next spring.

C. M. Ferguson, poultry specialist, said chickens are more susceptible to diseases than any other domestic animals and that the same care should be exercised as in the control of human diseases. He pointed out the enormous loss caused by internal parasites, namely, roundworms, coccidia and tapeworms and urged preventive measures be followed.

R. E. Cray of the poultry department of Ohio State University stressed the importance of selecting birds with high egg production. It was pointed out that the average egg production in Greene County was sixty eggs per bird, while 160 eggs per bird per year are necessary for a profit. Early maturity, lack of broodiness, persistency and intensity of production and absence of winter pause were mentioned as factors influencing egg production.

D. A. Palmer, Greenville, speaking of marketing problems, urged the necessity of producing quality products. Ed Ginevan, local poultryman, describing the management of his farm, said they stressed economical production of quality products. Motion pictures taken by the U. S. department of agriculture were shown at each session. At several places in these pictures activities at the Townsley Hatchery in Xenia were shown.

A guessing contest was won by Mrs. Robert Thomas of Beaver Creek Twp., and George L. Bradley of Xenia won second prize. This contest consisted of guessing the number of eggs produced by two birds furnished by Ed Ginevan. Prizes were awarded by the Xenia Farmers Exchange and Townsley Hatchery.

In connection with the Institute an exhibit of poultry and poultry appliances were made by poultrymen and merchants of the county. More than 200 poultrymen attended part of all of the sessions.

CENTRAL HIGH WILL HOLD FIRST DEBATE HERE ON JANUARY 16

The Central High School debate team will hold their first debates January 16 when one team will debate with Washington C. H., and the other with Osborn. The debaters have been rounding into shape for the opening of the debate season for the last two months.

The question to be debated this year is: "Resolved: that the chain store is detrimental to the community." This question is to be debated by all members of the Ohio State High School debating League of which Xenia Central is one. The league is under the direction of the division of public speaking of Ohio State University.

Other debates besides those arranged by the league are being scheduled by Professor Clyde Shumaker who is coaching the debate teams this year.

On the night of January 16 the Xenia debate team will entertain Washington C. H. here and the school will also send a team to Osborn on the same evening. January 23 Xenia will be host to South Solon and will send a team to Woodstock, January 30 London will visit Xenia for the final preliminary match here and Marysville will be visited by another Xenia team on the same evening. These dates may be changed because of conflict with the local basketball schedule.

The official enrollment of the Ohio State High School Debating League for 1929-1931 is 125 schools divided into seventeen districts. Seven schools were included in each district with the exception of three districts in which eight schools were included in order to avoid having districts with less than seven. The winner in each district will be determined by this preliminary series in a "round robin" process whereby every school will debate every other school in its own district once. District winners will then participate in an elimination series in which the losing schools are to drop from competition until only two schools are left. These two schools will participate in the final championship debate to be held at Columbus in the spring. It will not be possible to announce the pairing for the elimination series until after the completion of the present preliminary series.

FORMER XENIAN IS AUTO CRASH VICTIM

Mrs. Herman Marmion (Lois Manor), Mowattstown, O., formerly of this city, received painful cuts about the face and head and had several front teeth knocked out when the automobile in which she and Mr. Marmion were coming to this city was struck head-on by another automobile near New Vienna Friday afternoon. The other car was driven by a Mrs. Murray. Both cars were badly damaged.

Mrs. Marmion was removed to Wilmington where her injuries were treated and was later brought to this city. Mr. and Mrs. Marmion were enroute here to spend the week-end with Mrs. Marmion's mother, Mrs. Hannah Manor, W. Main St., when the accident happened.

THREE STOLEN CARS RECOVERED HERE

Within the last two days county authorities have recovered and identified the ownership of three stolen autos.

Communication with Detroit, Mich., police revealed that an Essex coach, 1929 model, found abandoned in the woods off the Fairground Road three miles northwest of Xenia Thursday, had been stolen in Michigan last March. The license plates had been removed and the motor number was chiseled off.

Two more cars were found abandoned on the Jamestown Pike, Friday. One was an Oakland sedan, said to have been stolen in Dayton and the other, a Chrysler coach, had been stolen in Washington C. H., authorities learned. Neither auto had been damaged.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES

The senior class of Central High School will publish a "Review" next Thursday. It is disclosed. There has been no edition of the school paper since the first few weeks of school but the seniors are taking over the responsibility of editing and publishing a Christmas edition. The paper will be an eight pages and will be written and composed entirely by members of the senior class. A large staff has been appointed to get the paper together.

Dorothy Lunsford has been selected as editor and will be assisted by Lois Spahr. Elwood Shaffer is sport editor and Edwin Rath is his assistant. Anita Cherry was selected as feature editor and will be assisted by Frances Beal and Wallace Adair. The rest of the staff is as follows: society editor, Jane Harner, assistant Virginia Martin; joke editor Isabelle Bowser; inquiring reporter, Betty Liddle; music editor, Frances Bryson; general reporter, Evaline Evans; exchange editor, Betty Leavitt; business manager, John Bull; assistant, Woodrow Brannin; circulation manager Mary Hayward; and typists, Dora Hayward, John Custer, Catherine Huffman, and Georgia Reitor.

The senior class held a short meeting Wednesday afternoon to decide about the Cen-Sen, school annual. It was decided by the vote of the class to publish a book smaller than usual but one that meets with the requirements as far as school annuals are concerned. The proposition was explained by a representative of an engraving company. The annual will sell to the students for fifty cents and a subscription campaign was launched at once to take care of the demand for books.

The senior class has charge of candy ball sales for the next four weeks and expect to put on some real sales. The senior girls held a home made fudge sale Wednesday afternoon and realized a neat sum. They gave the football boys a banquet the other evening and really showed themselves. The boys are still wishing that such affairs may be held often.

The senior class is getting out a program for all home basketball games this winter similar to that gotten out during the past football season. Names numbers and positions of players of both teams will be given on the cards. The class feels that this card will be a big help to those who attend the games. The program will keep the fans in closer contact with the players. The cards are made possible by advertisers whose names appear on the cards.

The Junior class did not profit by its Christmas dance last Friday night by at the same time did not get "into the hole" a great deal as is often the case. A crowd was on hand for the big party and all seemed to enjoy themselves to the utmost.

A physics club was organized by members of the senior physics class Wednesday morning. The club is somewhat a continuation of the chemistry club organized last year by the same group. Merion Leinberger was chosen president for this year while Wallace Adair was chosen vice president and Anita Cherry secretary-treasurer. Mr. Cranor was chosen as faculty advisor for the club. The president appointed a program committee composed of Dorothy Lunsford, Bob Kinsey, and Betty Leavitt to arrange a program for the next meeting of the club.

A special assembly was called last Friday for all students and a group of health pictures were shown on the screen in the auditorium. They were accompanied by an interesting lecture and proved very beneficial to the students.

A short assembly was called Tuesday afternoon and the question of the school annual was presented to the students. It was explained that as the regular sized annual had failed to be supported in a recent campaign it had been decided by the senior class to accept a smaller book for this year's publication. The students accepted the book and a subscription campaign was begun at once. The H. Y. club held its regular weekly meeting Monday night at the school building and an interesting discussion followed. Mr. Ewen gave an interesting talk to the boys after which the meeting was adjourned.

INCREASE IN COUNTY TAX DUPLICATE SHOWN

An increase of $40,110 in the 1930 Greene County tax duplicate over the 1929 duplicate is announced by County Auditor P. H. Creswell.

The 1930 duplicate amounts to $57,346,920, as compared with $57,306,810 last year. The valuation of taxable property in villages of the county and Xenia city increased $271,900 over 1929 but the duplicate of the townships decreased by $231,790.

VERDICT IN BELDEN CASE IS SUSTAINED

The second district Court of Appeals, in a decision announced Saturday, affirmed the judgment of the jury in Common Pleas Court, which had awarded Dilver Belden, Xenia, $1,204.01 in his suit seeking to recover $4,021.88 less a credit of $27 from The Central Acceptance Corp., of which he was formerly local agent.

Belden sought to recover four different amounts on as many causes of action. The charge of the trial judge to the jury was the basis of the principal objection of the Central Acceptance Corp. in carrying the case to the appellate court on error, but the appeals court ruled the charge fairly presented the case to the jury for its consideration and that no error is apparent which would warrant a reviewing court in disturbing the lower court's judgment.

Marshall and Marshall were attorneys for the plaintiff in error and Miller and Finney represented the defendant in error.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

But thou, O man of God, flee these things, and follow after righteousness, godliness, faith, love, patience, meekness. Fight the good fight of faith, lay hold on eternal life, whereunto thou art also called, and has professed a good profession before many witnesses. —I Timothy, vi, 11, 12.

JULIUS ROLSHOVEN

Julius Rolshoven did not have to wait for death to bring him recognition as an artist, as is, unfortunately, often the case in the profession where he held high station. Distinction was his portion early, and he continued a commanding figure to the end. Rich in an artistic heritage extending back for centuries, Mr. Rolshoven was making a name for himself before the average youth settles down to the serious problems of life. It was characteristic of the stalwart old world stock from which he sprang that there was never any letdown in his application to the work to which he had set himself.

The world was Mr. Rolshoven's studio throughout the major portion of his career, with Europe claiming a large share of his time. His cosmopolitanism is revealed in the fact that he was equally at home in his Florence studio, that was said to have been at one time the home of Leonardo da Vinci's "Mona Lisa," or as a member of the exclusive Tass society of artists, fraternizing with and putting on canvas, with a skill and a fidelity that constitutes a lasting contribution to the all too meager records of early America, the life and customs of this remnant of a long famous Indian tribe in their New Mexican stronghold.

Under such conditions it was not strange that he was even better known elsewhere than in the city of his birth, for which he always held a strong affection, and which in turn took pardonable pride in the achievements of its distinguished son, whose contributions to art will assume still greater importance as the passing years give that wider perspective they always do to a genius and his works.

GRIZZLY BEARS

Grizzly bears are among the animals that are growing scarce, according to Dr. Bell of the U. S. biological survey. This will remind some old boys of this city of the days when they used to creep into the haymow to read the dime novels. In those thrilling works of literature, grizzly bears played a leading part.

The hero was usually a trapper, hunter, and Indian fighter, and many of his conflicts were with the fierce grizzlies of the plains. The dreamy boy revelled in these yarns, and had visions of himself armed with rifles, bowie knives, and other weapons, engaged in hand to hand fight with these monsters. Out of these conflicts of course he always emerged victorious, amid the plaudits of the pioneers.

The settlers in those regions did not probably consider those bears as desirable neighbors. As the fiercest members of the tribe, many a pioneer lost his life before their unexpected attack. They can well be spared.

COMFORTABLE TRAVEL

A leading railroad system has appointed a woman as assistant to its president, and her principal function will be to look after the comfort of women passengers. The railroads have had to suffer severe competition, but one way to hold their business is to make travel very comfortable.

People are deterred from such travel if it tires them, and they are attracted to it if it is restful and pleasant. The shape of seats and provision of good ventilation might be mentioned as two special factors of great importance. A poorly ventilated car with seats that do not fit the human body, makes no business for a railroad.

The designation of Sir Alfred Isaacs, a native-born Australian, to be governor-general of Australia sets a precedent which other dominions are likely to note with interest.

KEEP GOING!

Often, too often, in my life I have been a bad sport. I have whined. I have complained, I have railed against life and said it was treating me badly.

I have called it a fly-trap. I have thought men and women mean and worthless and shallow. I have been afraid. I have feared poverty and sickness and loneliness and I have gone down into hell of self-hatred and self-disgust. I have hated my own pessimism, even as I soothed and encouraged it.

And then, from somewhere, I have felt a Lift. My spirits have risen. I have seen a glow on the faces of men and women. I have seen a gleam on the dull horizon and I have come up out of the darkness—to be ashamed of myself and to wonder why I was so foolish, so blind, so lacking in faith, so ungrateful for this chance to be alive.

I do not know why we fall into those ghastly pits. I cannot tell you what brings us back from them into quiet and thankful sanity once more.

But I know that this happens to me and I am sure that it must happen to everyone else. There may be solid men and women who are "always the same," who have "even dispositions" and who never lose heart and never change. Some people SEEM to be like that, and yet I do not believe they really are. I think that most of us are poised between ecstasy and despair and are swung by small forces in this direction or in that.

We are waiting for a Lift. We are expecting other people or some mysterious force we cannot describe to come along and make us what we ought to be. We KNOW what we want to be, but we are not going there under our own power. We get into a mud-hole and somebody pulls us out. "Somebody" always has pulled us out—somebody with more courage and more hopefulness than we have—and we fall to believing that somebody will always be at hand to give us that Lift we expect.

In a way, we hitch-hike through life. We stand by the side of the road and raise a begging hand. And there are two kinds of Hitch-Hikers: there are those who Sit and Wait and beg for rides, and there are those others who WALK while they are longing for a Lift—and are getting somewhere in the meantime.

And I hope we can be like those fellows who walk while they wait, who keep going under their own power, who want a Lift but who keep on walking. . . . I expect a little help. I hope I get a Lift from life, but I pray I have courage enough to keep going . . . keep going . . . keep going . . . until the Lift comes along.

Bo-Broadway

—By—
JOSEPH VAN RAALTE—

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.—Jean Norris, Tammany Town's only female Magistrate, in an interview the other day admitted that for years she had judged without knowing of the existence of stool pigeons.

With the District Attorney "astonished at racketeering, the Police Commissioner 'astonished' at the revelations about some of his Vice Squad men, and most of the editors in town flabbergasted at what every police reporter has known for years—why blame poor Jean Norris?

THEATRE PESTS

New York theatre managers are at a loss to know how to handle well-dressed rowdies who, as a rule, arrive at the playhouse in groups of from four to eight, long after the curtain has come up on the first act, and chatter, guffaw and giggle, oblivious of their surroundings.

The male members of these parties creak in obtrusive evening attire. And despite the well-intentioned efforts of modiste, hair-dresser and complexion cozier, the female members, reeking of gin, cheap cigarettes and expensive perfume, present the raw and raucous front with which tradition invests the Sisterhood of the Solied.

They seem never to have been able to master their initial astonishment at the fact that they really were rich. Cursed with this permanent surprise, and finding all other outlets inadequate, they apparently decided to give full sway to vulgarity—the greatest of

ANALYSIS OF DAVIS' VICTORY IN SENATE MADE BY STEWART

—CHARLES P. STEWART—

WASHINGTON.—Although the senate seated James J. Davis of Pennsylvania as one of its members in spite of Senator Gerald P. Nye's plea for more time to investigate his campaign expenses, it was not the kind of a victory to leave a pleasant taste in a sensitive person's mouth.

Nye, as chairman of the committee named to inquire into the cost of senatorial candidates' fights for nomination and election, had asked, among others, what the Pennsylvania bill amounted to.

The latter's managers put the figure for their state's entire G. O. P. ticket at $368,962. Nye said this seemed to him pretty stiff, considering that the senate a few years ago severely criticized a $190,000 total spent to elect Truman H. Newberry of Michigan. Still, he intimated that he would not oppose Davis' investiture with a toga, inasmuch as the $368,962 was not his reckoning alone, but his whole ticket's.

Then, at the last minute, there turned up $272,312 additional, as Nye footed the items, which the Pennsylvania G. O. P. campaign folk had inadvertently omitted.

It was to give him time to analyze this extra $272,312 that Chairman Nye asked for two or three more days before the swearing in of the retiring secretary of labor as a senator.

Nye appeared to think that a senator-elect with nothing to be afraid of would not mind waiting. Davis preferred not to, however.

There is no denying the soundness of James J.'s logic in taking advantage of his opportunity to get into the senate when he knew he had a favorable majority, rather than cooling his heels in the lobby pending Nye's scrutiny of the new-submitted campaign expense photostats.

A margin of only one adverse vote is enough to keep a senator-elect out of the senate, but, once admitted, it takes two-thirds to put him out.

Thus a senator's position is far stronger than a mere senator-elect's.

One might reasonably surmise, too, that James J. is especially likely to have realized this distinction.

That is to say, he was chosen to fill out the unexpired third of the term to which his fellow Pennsylvanian, William S. Vare, originally was elected, only to fight unsuccessfully for nearly four years to be admitted, while all the while certain he would be able to stay in if he could but effect an entrance.

And how (do I hear the question asked) was James J. so sure he had the necessary votes to admit him the day he presented his credentials?

Why, his friends polled the senate for him in advance, of course. Anyone who doubts that such precaution was taken, to safeguard him against the risk of a rejection, really is too unsophisticated to get far in politics.

Puddler Jim, then, knew exactly what he was about, and deemed it advisable to take his senate seat when he was certain it was available, trusting to the justice of his cause and the two-thirds' rule to keep him in it, whatever Senator Nye might have to offer later.

How his majority of 58 to 27 was insured for him is a different question, concerning which there has been considerable speculation.

The senate divided peculiarly. It did not divide Republican and Democratic, liberally and conservatively, wetly and dryly or on any other hard-and-fast lines. One member even of Senator Nye's own investigating committee (Senator Patterson of Missouri) voted to seat the puddler.

A union man, the Pennsylvanian naturally is powerfully backed by the A. F. of L., of which many lawmakers are deathly fearful. That undoubtedly was an immense aid to him.

Democratic Leader Robinson helped him all he could, because of the splurge Robinson is making of cooperation with the White House, but a bolt from the Arkansas' leadership is developing among his followers, somewhat.

Maybe it is significant that three-fourths of the newly-seated senators voted to hold up the puddler's credentials.

There will be several more of them at the next session of congress.

Does this hint that Davis was well advised to risk no delay in entrenching himself as firmly as possible? One is entitled to wonder.

The fact remains that Investigator-in-Chief Nye is going right on with his inquiry.

Let apologists say what they will, $641,274 is a lot of money to spend on an election campaign. It is certain to be talked about. Talk will not get James J. Davis out of his senate seat, but it may make his senatorial term uncomfortable for him.

There may also yet be an opportunity for 58 senators to do a deal of explaining why they voted to admit him.

Broiled or Pan Fried Chops
Scalloped Potatoes Mashed Turnips
Raw Vegetable Salad
Cranberry Pie Tea

Today's Recipes
Broiling of Steaks and Chops.—Wipe the meat with a cloth wrung out of cold water. Heat the broiler for ten minutes, and rub with a small piece of fat cut from the meat. Place the meat in the center of the broiler rack with the skin or fat side on the outside toward the front. Place the broiling pan as near the heat as possible without coming in actual contact with the flame. Broil the meat two minutes on one side; repeat this until the steak is done. From 10 to 15 minutes is sufficient time for a rare steak one and one-half inches thick. Cook longer if steak must be well done.

Pan Broiling.—The same cuts of meat are suitable for pan broiling that are used for broiling. Heat a frying pan of heavy weight material till very hot. Place the steak in the hot frying pan without any added fat. Sear quickly on one side while counting ten, turn quickly and sear on the other side. Repeat, then lower the heat slightly and continue the broiling and turning until meat is done. Continually pour your oil the melted fat that may collect in the pan as this tends to dry up the juices and make the meat tough. Broil about the same length of time as when using broiler. Sprinkle with salt and pepper. Dot with butter and serve at once.

Scalloped Potatoes.—Cover the bottom of a baking dish with a fine layer of cracker crumbs; add, eight medium-sized, uncooked potatoes, sliced thin; sprinkle with two teaspoons of salt mixed with one-fourth a teaspoon of pepper; add milk almost to cover; dot with bits of butter. Bake in a hot oven (450 degrees F.) for ten minutes, then a slow oven (325 degrees F.) for 30 minutes.

Cranberry Pie.—One and one-half cups cranberries, three-fourths cup sugar, one-half cup water. Cook cranberries, water and sugar for about ten minutes. Cool, place in one crust with a high rim and place strips of pastry, lattice fashion, across the top. Bake in a hot oven (450 degrees F.) for ten minutes, then a slow oven (325 degrees F.) for 30 minutes.

PUDDING (Mrs. Mary Morton's Daily Tested Recipe).

One pound graham crackers, rolled; two cups fresh berries or one can berries, drained; three eggs, a little cinnamon, one teaspoon baking powder, one cup milk. Mix and bake in moderate oven about half an hour. Serve with milk or any favorite sauce.

Asthma Found In Children Oftener

—By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

Asthma is found more often in children than in adults. It often lasts from childhood through adult life. Quite as often a child will "out grow the asthma," as the saying is.

Asthma comes on in paroxysms. During the paroxysm the breath seems almost shut off. It is known now what occurs to the afflicted person. There are muscular bands around the smaller air tubes in the lung. During the asthmatic paroxysm these muscles go into spasm and shut off the air tubes or greatly diminish their caliber. This causes the difficult breathing. Usually the asthmatic experiences more difficulty in getting the air out of the lungs than in drawing it in.

What causes the muscles to go into spasm? These muscles are of the smooth or involuntary kind; they are not under control of the will, but under the control of the automatic nervous system. Some stimulus must effect the automatic nervous system which causes it to constrict these little muscles around the air tubes.

About fifteen years ago, cases of asthma brought on by particular foods began to be reported. Thus a child was found to be sensitive to wheat bread; whenever it ate wheat bread an attack of asthma occurred. The wheat apparently stimulated the automatic nervous system and threw the muscles around the air tubes into spasm. Many kinds of foods were found which caused this sensitivity.

The results of treatment—by withdrawing the offending food from the diet—along this line have recently been summarized. Fifteen years of experience! Different physicians differ in their reports. Some say that they relieve 90 per cent of their asthma cases in children, some that they relieve only 40 per cent. The reason for this discrepancy is probably that all the cases are not followed closely; a child is dismissed as cured and so marked on the physician's record; then another attack occurs and the child is taken to another physician.

Pay No Heed To Gossip

—By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

There is an old saying: "Give a dog a bad name and hang him." This is equivalent to stating that if one once acquires an unsavory reputation one need not hope to regain one's good name. I don't believe this is altogether true, however.

I think that while undoubtedly there are people who are only too willing to believe any evil even of a friend, who appear to revel in idle gossip which smirches a reputation, a person who lives straight and continues to do so and pays no attention to malicious lies about them, generally wins the respect of everyone whose opinion is worth anything. There are exceptions to this rule. I know. There are perfectly innocent people who have suffered horribly from calumny, but these are exceptional cases.

A girl asks me how she can prove her innocence after someone has started talk about her which is losing her her friends. "Worry!" By going quietly on your way, paying no attention to the stories, Worried, unless someone accuses you to your face. Then you can defend yourself warmly. Otherwise, by continuing to live a pure life and ignoring the gossip, you will eventually win respect and refute the lies.

PATSY: I think until the boy friend is ready to ask you to "go steady" with him, I would continue to occasionally go out with others, Patsy. No use, as you say, in your sitting at home while he has a good time.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

But thou, O man of God, flee these things, and follow after righteousness, godliness, faith, love, patience, meekness. Fight the good fight of faith, lay hold on eternal life, whereunto thou art also called, and has professed a good profession before many witnesses.

JULIUS ROLSHOVEN

Julius Rolshoven did not have to wait for death to bring him recognition as an artist, as is, unfortunately, often the case in the profession where he held high station. Distinction was his portion early, and he continued a commanding figure to the end. Rich in an artistic heritage extending back for centuries, Mr. Rolshoven was making a name for himself before the average youth settles down to the serious problems of life. It was characteristic of the stalwart old world stock from which he sprang that there was never any letdown in his application to the work to which he had set himself.

The world was Mr. Rolshoven's studio throughout the major portion of his career, with Europe claiming a large share of his time. His cosmopolitanism is revealed in the fact that he was equally at home in his Florence studio, that was said to have been at one time the home of Leonardo da Vinci's "Mona Lisa," or as a member of the exclusive Tass society of artists, fraternizing with and putting on canvas, with a skill and a fidelity that constitutes a lasting contribution to the art of meager records of early America, the life and customs of this remnant of a long famous Indian tribe in their New Mexican stronghold.

Under such conditions it was not strange that he was even better known elsewhere than in the city of his birth, for which he always held a strong affection, and which in turn took pardonable pride in the achievements of its distinguished son, whose contributions to art will assume still greater importance as the passing years give that wider perspective they always do to a genius and his works.

GRIZZLY BEARS

Grizzly bears are among the animals that are growing scarce, according to Dr. Bell of the U. S. biological survey. This will remind some old boys of this city of the days when they used to creep into the haymow to read the dime novels. In those thrilling works of literature, grizzly bears played a leading part.

The hero was usually a trapper, hunter, and Indian fighter, and many of his conflicts were with the fierce grizzlies of the plains. The dreamy boy revelled in these yarns, and had visions of himself armed with rifles, bowie knives, and other weapons, engaged in hand to hand fight with these monsters. Out of these conflicts of course he always emerged victorious, amid the plaudits of the pioneers.

The settlers in those regions did not probably consider those bears as desirable neighbors. As the fiercest members of the tribe, many a pioneer lost his life before their unexpected attack. They can well be spared.

COMFORTABLE TRAVEL

A leading railroad system has appointed a woman as assistant to its president, and her principal function will be to look after the comfort of women passengers. The railroads have had to suffer severe competition, but one way to hold their business is to make travel very comfortable.

People are deterred from such travel if it tires them, and they are attracted to it if it is restful and pleasant. The shape of seats and provision of good ventilation might be mentioned as two special factors of great importance. A poorly ventilated car with seats that do not fit the human body, makes no business for a railroad.

The designation of Sir Alfred Isaacs, a native-born Australian, to be governor-general of Australia sets a precedent which other dominions are likely to note with interest.

KEEP GOING!

Often, too often, in my life I have been a bad sport. I have whined. I have complained. I have railed against life and said it was treating me badly.

I have called it a fly-trap. I have thought men and women mean and worthless and shallow. I have been afraid. I have feared poverty and sickness and loneliness and I have gone down into hells of self-pity and self-disgust. I have hated my own pessimism, even as I soothed and encouraged it.

And then, from somewhere, I have felt a Lift. My spirits have risen. I have seen a glow on the faces of men and women. I have seen a gleam on the dull horizon and I have come up out of the darkness—to be ashamed of myself and to wonder why I was so foolish, so blind, so lacking in faith, so ungrateful for this chance to be alive.

I do not know why we fall into those ghastly pits. I cannot tell you what brings us back from them into quiet and thankful sanity once more.

But I know that this happens to me and I am sure that it must happen to everyone else. There may be solid men and women who are "always the same," who have "even dispositions" and who never lose heart and never change. Some people SEEM to be like that, and yet I do not believe they really are. I think that most of us are poised between ecstasy and despair and are swung by small forces in this direction or in that.

We are waiting for a Lift. We are expecting other people or some mysterious force we cannot describe to come along and make us what we ought to be. We KNOW what we want to be, but we are not going there under our own power. We get into a mud-hole and somebody pulls us out. "Somebody" always has pulled us out—somebody with more courage and more hopefulness than we have—and we fall to believing that somebody will always be at hand to give us that Lift we expect.

In a way, we hitch-hike through life. We stand by the side of the road and raise a begging hand. And there are two kinds of Hitch-Hikers: there are those who Sit and Wait and beg for rides, and there are those others who WALK while they are longing for a Lift—and are getting somewhere in the meantime.

And I hope we can be like those fellows who walk while they wait, who keep going under their own power, who want a Lift but who keep on walking. . . . I expect a little help. I hope I get a Lift from life, but I pray I have courage enough to keep going . . . keep going . . . keep going . . . until the Lift comes along.

ANALYSIS OF DAVIS' VICTORY IN SENATE MADE BY STEWART

—CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON.—Although the senate seated James J. Davis of Pennsylvania as one of its members in spite of Senator Gerald P. Nye's plea for more time to investigate his campaign expenses, it was not the kind of a victory to leave a pleasant taste in a sensitive person's mouth.

Nye, as chairman of the committee named to inquire into the cost of senatorial candidates' fights for nomination and election, had asked, among others, what the Pennsylvania's bill amounted to.

The latter's managers put the figure for their state's entire G. O. P. ticket at $368,962. Nye said this seemed to him pretty stiff, considering that the senate a few years ago severely criticized a $100,000 total spent to elect Truman H. Newberry of Michigan. Still, he intimated that he would not oppose Davis' investiture with a toga, inasmuch as the $368,962 was not his reckoning alone, but his whole ticket's.

Then, at the last minute, there turned up $272,312 additional. Nye footed the items, which the Pennsylvania G. O. P. campaign folk had inadvertently omitted.

It was to give him time to analyze this extra $272,312 that Chairman Nye asked for two or three more days before the swearing in of the retiring secretary of labor as a senator.

Nye appeared to think that a senator-elect with nothing to be afraid of would not mind waiting. Davis preferred not to, however.

There is no denying the soundness of James J.'s logic in taking advantage of his opportunity to get into the senate when he knew he had a favorable majority, rather than cooling his heels in the lobby pending Nye's scrutiny of the newly-submitted campaign expense photostats.

A margin of only one adverse vote is enough to keep a senator-elect out of the senate, but, once admitted, it takes two-thirds to put him out.

Thus a senator's position is far stronger than a mere senator-elect's.

One might reasonably surmise, too, that James J. is especially likely to have realized this distinction. That is to say, he was chosen to fill out the unexpired third of the term to which his fellow Pennsylvanian, William S. Vare, originally was elected, only to fight unsuccessfully for nearly four years to be admitted, while all the while certain he would be able to stay in if he could but effect an entrance.

And how (do I hear the question asked) was James J. so sure he had the necessary votes to admit him the day he presented his credentials?

Why, his friends polled the senate for him in advance, of course. Anyone who doubts that such precaution was taken, to safeguard him against the risk of a rejection, really is too unsophisticated to get far in politics.

Puddler Jim, then, knew exactly what he was about, and deemed it advisable to take his senate seat when he was certain it was available, trusting to the justice of his cause and the two-thirds' rule to keep him in it, whatever Senator Nye might have to offer later.

How his majority of 58 to 27 was insured for him is a different question, concerning which there has been considerable speculation.

The senate divided peculiarly. It did not divide Republicanly and Democraticly, liberally and conservatively, wetly and dryly or on any other hard-and-fast lines. One member even of Senator Nye's own investigating committee (Senator Patterson of Missouri) voted to seat the puddler.

A union man, the Pennsylvania naturally is powerfully backed by the A. F. of L., of which many lawmakers are deathly fearful. That undoubtedly was an immense aid to him.

Democratic Leader Robinson helped him all he could, because of the spurge Robinson is making of cooperation with the White House, but a bolt from the Arkansas's leadership is developing among his followers, somewhat.

Maybe it is significant that three-fourths of the newly-seated senators voted to hold up the puddler's credentials.

There will be several more of them at the next session of congress.

Does this hint that Davis was well advised to risk no delay in entrenching himself as formidably as possible? One is entitled to wonder.

MENU HINT

Broiled or Pan Fried Chops
Scalloped Potatoes Mashed Turnips
Raw Vegetable Salad
Cranberry Pie Tea

Today's Recipes
Broiling of Steaks and Chops.—Wipe the meat with a cloth wrung out of cold water. Heat the broiler for ten minutes, and rub with a small piece of fat cut from the meat.

Place the meat in the center of the broiler rack with the skin or fat side on the outside toward the front. Place the broiling pan as near the heat as possible without coming in actual contact with the flame. Broil the meat two minutes on one side; repeat this until the steak is done. From 10 to 15 minutes is sufficient time for a rare steak one and one-half inches thick. Cook longer if steak must be well done.

Pan Broiling.—The same cuts of meat are suitable for pan broiling that are used for broiling. Heat a frying pan of heavy weight material till very hot. Place the steak in the hot frying pan without any added fat. Sear quickly on one side while counting ten, turn quickly and sear on the other side. Repeat, then lower the heat slightly and continue the broiling and turning until meat is done. Continually pour your oil the melted fat that may collect in the pan as this tends to dry up the juices and make the meat tough. Broil about the same length of time as when using broiler. Sprinkle with salt and pepper. Dot with butter and serve at once.

Scalloped Potatoes.—Cover the bottom of a baking dish with a fine layer of cracker crumbs; add eight medium-sized, uncooked potatoes, sliced thin; sprinkle with two teaspoons of salt mixed with one-fourth a teaspoon of pepper; add milk almost to cover; dot with two tablespoons of butter cut into bits. Bake in moderate oven one hour, covered during the first half hour.

Cranberry Pie.—One and one-half cups cranberries, three-fourths cup sugar, one-half cup water. Cook cranberries, water and sugar for about ten minutes. Cool, place in one crust with a high rim and place strips of pastry, lattice fashion, across the top. Bake in a hot oven (450 degrees F.) for ten minutes, then a slow oven (325 degrees F.) for 30 minutes.

PUDDING
(Mrs. Mary Morton's Daily Tested Recipe.)

One pound graham crackers, rolled; two cups fresh berries or one can berries, drained; three eggs, a little cinnamon, one teaspoon baking powder, one cup milk. Mix and bake in moderate oven about half an hour. Serve with milk or any favorite sauce.

Asthma Found In Children Oftener

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

Asthma is found more often in children than in adults. It often lasts from childhood through adult life. Quite as often a child will "out grow the asthma," as the saying is.

Asthma comes on in paroxysms. During the paroxysm the breath seems almost shut off. It is known now what occurs to the afflicted person. There are muscular bands around the smaller air tubes in the lung. During the asthmatic paroxysm these muscles go into spasm and shut off the air tubes or greatly diminish their caliber. This causes the difficult breathing. Usually the asthmatic experiences more difficulty in getting the air out of the lungs than in drawing it in.

What causes the muscles to go into spasm? These muscles are of the smooth or involuntary kind; they are not under control of the will, but under the control of the automatic nervous system. Some stimulus must effect the automatic nervous system which causes it to constrict these little muscles around the air tubes.

About fifteen years ago, cases of asthma brought on by particular foods began to be reported. Thus a child was found to be sensitive to wheat bread: whenever it ate wheat bread an attack of asthma occurred. The wheat apparently stimulated the automatic nervous system and threw the muscles around the air tubes into spasm. Many kinds of foods were found which caused this sensitivity.

The results of treatment—by withdrawing the offending food from the diet—along this line have recently been summarized. Fifteen years of experience! Different physicians differ in their reports. Some say that they relieve 90 per cent of their asthma cases in children, some that they relieve only 40 per cent. The reason for this discrepancy is probably that all the cases are not followed closely; a child is dismissed as cured and so marked on the physician's record; then another attack occurs and the child is taken to another physician.

Pay No Heed To Gossip

—By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

There is an old saying: "Give a dog a bad name and hang him." This is equivalent to stating that if one once acquires an unsavory reputation one need not hope to regain one's good name. I don't believe this is altogether true, however.

I think that while undoubtedly there are people who are only too willing to believe any evil even of a friend, who appear to reveal in idle gossip which smirches a reputation, a person who lives straight and continues to do so and pays no attention to malicious lies about them, generally wins the respect of everyone whose opinion is worth anything. There are exceptions to this rule, I know. There are perfectly innocent people who have suffered horribly from calumny, but these are exceptional cases.

A girl asks me how she can prove her innocence after someone has started talk about her which is losing her her friends. WORRIED: By going quietly on your way, paying no attention to the stories. Worried, unless someone accuses you to your face. Then you can defend yourself calmly. Otherwise, by continuing to live a pure life and ignoring the gossip, you will eventually win respect and refute the lies.

PATSY: I think until the boy friend is ready to ask you to "go steady" with him, I would continue to occasionally go out with others. Patsy, No use, as you say, in your sitting at home while he has a good time.

FRENCHY: I think possibly it would be better for you to take the girl at her word for the present. Frenchy, Continue to be friendly, but take another girl out once in awhile and appear to be giving up hope. It may be if she sees that you are apparently no longer so bent on winning her, she will realize that you mean more to her than she thinks. Such a course will do no harm, and may advance your cause.

BLONDIE AND BROWN EYES Answer to question 1: You can't do much about the girl who lies about you. Lead blameless lives, say nothing about her, and trust your very good friends will refuse to believe her stories.

2. If the truth about one is a disagreeable truth it hurts. But otherwise it cannot. Lies hurt one but Tennyson says:

"A lie that is all a lie can be me, and fought with outright. "But a lie that is half the truth is a harder matter to fight."

3. Generally speaking, it is true that "birds of a feather flock together." If the birds have the choosing of their own associates this is true. Sometimes birds of different plumage are forced by circumstances to associate, however.

4. Certainly it is all right for a girl to have more than one boy friend if she is not engaged or "going steady."

Discouraged H.: You might try screaming for help. Discouraged of slapping the boys' faces. These are old-fashioned tactics but effective, I should imagine.

Sun's Ray Valuable To Health

By GLADYS GLAD

If you can remember so far back, you will recall that the gnomes that peopled the fairy tales of your youth were tiny, dwarfed creatures that lived under mountains. These gnomes never left the dark recesses of their underground dwellings, never saw the sunlight, never exposed themselves to this vitalizing force. Is it any wonder, then, that they were puny, diminutive creatures? Man, in the same way, would grow stunted and diseased if he attempted to live without sunshine. For sunshine is one of the most important factors in physical health.

We cannot easily state just what it is that the sun does to us. But we know that it kills germs, cures many diseases and unseen ills, revitalizes tissues, and builds up in us resistance to disease.

It is the short, ultra-violet rays in sunlight that possess this life-giving power. And in the winter many of us are deprived of these beneficial rays. You can't go out of doors and take your sun bath in a scanty bathing suit in mid-winter. And yet, if you take your sun bath clad in the heavy garments that the cold weather demands, you will forfeit half its benefits. For the ultra-violet rays do not penetrate heavy clothing.

Again, you can't take your sun bath behind an ordinary pane of glass, for the regular standard glass generally used in windows excludes these health-giving rays.

However, scientists have recently proclaimed the value of using quartz glass in windows. This glass, it has been proven, transfers indoors the maximum ultra-violet rays of the sun, and enables one to procure the benefits that result from exposure to sunlight in winter as well as in summer.

The upper ten stories of one of the largest office buildings in New York City have windows made of quartz glass. And I hope the day will come when every habitation and office will be equipped with windows of this glass. For the ultra-violet rays of the sun are so essential to health that no effort to procure them can be too great.

SPORT SNAP SHOTS

FRAMED
by Phil

Coach Bill Belanich has been working over time during the past week in an effort to shape his University of Dayton basketball quintet into smooth running machine for the first of two games this season with Cedarville College Tuesday night next week at the Dayton coliseum.

The Bostons surprised last season by defeating the Flyers at Dayton and may win again this time because the only lettermen to return to the Dayton court squad this year was Ed Flanagan, former U. of D. Prep star, the remainder of the team being composed mostly of sophomore material. The outstanding candidates this year are Charley Kronauge and Pete Robb, center and forward, respectively.

The Flyers meet Defiance College two days after the Cedarville contest, on December 18 and this will be their last game until after the holiday season.

Birch Bell, the "Wesley Fessler" of Xenia Central High athletics this season, all-Miami League forward last season, is the only survivor from the first all-star league basketball quintet selected in 1929-30. Hoover, Troy, forward; John Hurley, Xenia, center; and Joe Smittle, Xenia, and Champ Weaver, Miamiburg, guards, other members of the mythical first team, have graduated.

Two of the five players chosen on the second all-league team, however, are available again this season. They are Kritzer, Sidney, center, second highest league scorer last season, and R. Weaver, Miamiburg, guard, brother of Champ. Neth, Piqua, and Schreiber, Miamiburg, forwards, and R. Scott, Troy, guard, are the other second team choices who will be among the missing this season.

It is becoming a popular fad now-a-days to think up good charity football games and our suggestion would be a post-season contest between the two eleven-a-side squads. The contest would be held in the country—Notre Dame's first team and Notre Dame's "shock troops."

Worries of football coaches are many as Knute Rockne pointed out in a recent radio address. Asked where he would want to coach if he ever leaves Notre Dame, Knute said he would either like to coach an orphan asylum team because there would be no fond parents of players meddling into his affairs, or else coach at Sing Sing prison because there would be no alumni to bother him.

The approach of another baseball season is recalled to mind with the announcement twenty-two exhibition baseball games are to be played at St. Petersburg, Fla., in March between the New York Yankees, Boston Braves and other major league clubs training in Florida. Others are to be arranged later. The Yankees will arrive there with the entire team of regulars and rookies March 1. They will be preceded to the Sunshine City by the Boston Braves.

"BUDDY" ROGERS IS STRICKEN IN TOLEDO

TOLEDO, O., Dec. 13.—Charles "Buddy" Rogers, motion picture actor, was to undergo an operation in a hospital here today for acute appendicitis. He had been suffering sharp pains in his side for more than a week, it was learned. The seriousness of his condition was not known until yesterday.

Rogers was taken to the hospital two hours after his scheduled departure for Hollywood where he was to begin work on a new picture. He will probably be confined to the hospital here for a week, it was said.

Central Triumphs Over Waynesville High

BUCCANEERS WIN IN LAST MINUTES FROM SCRAPPY VISITORS

Locals Lack Polish; Dalton and Price Lead Scoring

By PHIL FRAME

XENIA Central High, which is undertaking one of the most pretentious basketball schedules in the school's history, opened its current hardwood season with an expected triumph over Waynesville High at the local gymnasium Friday night, but the margin of victory was only 24 to 19 as the scrappy little Warren County team proved a rather large order of chili sauce for a warm-up contest.

As is the case nine times out of ten in the seasonal debut of a basketball team, the Buccaneer basketballers lacked the polished style of play which is bound to come as the season progresses and their floor tactics were more reminiscent of football than basketball.

Even so, congratulations are in order that the Bucs played as well as they did, taking into consideration the fact Waynesville, having already played four games this season, and possessing a quintet far superior to that which faced Xenia in the 1929-30 inaugural game, displayed superior teamwork and had nearly twice as many shots at the basket, a large percentage of the attempts going astray.

The only points scored in the first quarter were due to a basket by Freddie Dalton, Buccaneer sophomore forward, the period ending 2 to 0 in Xenia's favor. In the second quarter Dalton contributed two more fielders and a free throw. Price made a two-pointer and Thompson a foul, the Buccaneer margin at half-time being 10 to 5 as Waynesville scored five points on two baskets by Ellis and a foul by Savage.

At the close of the third stanza Xenia's margin was 15 to 11. "Long" David Smith, sophomore center prospect, accounting for four of the five Buccaneer points obtained in this chucker, while Price made a free throw. Waynesville boosted its total six points on another brace of fielders by the efficient Ellis and fouls by Miltenberger and Wallace.

Xenia outscored the visitors nine to eight in the last period but there was a time when Waynesville not only overcame the Buccaneer lead but actually was ahead by one point. Price started the period off with a close-in shot but the six-point margin evaporated as a result of two baskets by Turner, one by Malmous and a foul by Turner, changing the count to 18 to 17 in Waynesville's favor. Wallace fouled Thompson, however, while the latter was in the act of shooting and Howard, having made the basket under difficulties, added a foul. Dalton then contributed another free throw. Turner shot a foul but Price dribbled in for a "bunny" that made things safe and Thompson made another charity shot as the game ended.

Xenia recorded eight baskets, one more than Waynesville obtained, and converted eight out of sixteen free throws, while the visitors made good five out of ten foul shots. Dalton scored eight points, followed by Price with seven and Ellis tallied eight for the losers. Referee Mackey called a total of twenty-three personal fouls, of which fifteen were on Waynesville. Only one player, Miltenberger, Waynesville guard, was disqualified on personals. He retired in the third period. Birch Bell, all-Miami Valley League forward last season, did not score a single point. If memory serves he only took two shots the entire game. Not many more than that anyway.

Xenia has two more games before Christmas holidays and both will be played here next week-end, the Bucs entertaining Wilmington Friday night and Washington C. H. Saturday night. Lineups:

MANY STAR TACKLES THIS YEAR GREAT NEBRASKA STAR FINDS

Sington Of Alabama, Rhea of Nebraska, Edwards Of Washington State, Among Linemen Favored By All-American

EDITOR'S NOTE: Ed Weir of Nebraska was one of the greatest tackles the mid-west has produced. He was All-American in 1924 and 1925. Today he is assistant coach at the Cornhusker institution. In the accompanying articles, second of the "Who's Who in 1930 Football" series, Weir tells you about the great tackles of the season.

By ED WEIR
All-American Tackle—1924-1925
Written Exclusively for Central Press and The Gazette

In discussing this year's crop of tackles throughout the country, I have judged them by their ability to measure up to the requirements of the position.

An outstanding tackle should be well proportioned physically, weighing close to 200 around six to six-two in height. Often when they are much bigger than this, they are generally not active enough on their feet and when they are much under this mark, often times they can't take the beatings that a tackle must take.

He must be grounded in the various types of offensive football because the tackle occupies the key position which most offenses are aimed at. They either try to go inside of him or outside.

He should be able to get down the field under punts with the ends as most teams plan to send three men down on the first count, and by "first count" I mean the tackle doesn't stay in the line to block, but goes down when the ball is snapped, and most teams send the best of the two tackles down with the ends. That means, of course, that he must have more than average speed. It's a large order, but there are some players who measure up to these standards this year, as there are every year.

The tackle usually finds two men "working on" him. The wingback and end are usually trying to block him out of the play. That means he must have big and active hands to ward off not only these two assigned to him, but also he must be able to wade into the interference and do as much as he can to pile it up and if possible, make the tackle.

Sington of Alabama, Alabama has a big boy, Freddie Sington, who has played a great role in that team's great season. Sington is a powerhouse in himself, not only stopping plays that come his way but managing to get around and haul down from behind some that are intended to go the other way.

Glenn Edwards, a Washington State junior, who weighs 215 and stands six-two, is another outstanding performer who added material to the Cougar's Pacific coast championship.

Hugh Rhea, of Nebraska, is one of the mid-west's best. He stands six-one and weighs 216, and is fast on his feet. Rhea is the National A. A. U. junior champion shot putter and has gotten better than 50 feet in competition. Rhea never saw a football until he enrolled at the Husker school. He is playing his second year on the varsity and went great guns this season.

Milo Libratovich has been one of the Wisconsin Badgers' best players throughout the season. He is a senior, weighs 216 and stands six-two. Wisconsin will miss him next year.

Robert Hall, a junior, has added Coach Howard Jones mightily at University of Southern California. He's a 211-pounder.

John M. Price, Ft. Dodge, Ia., is one of Army's best. He weighs 220 and stands six-three. He's a junior.

Other Fine Tackles Although Princeton had a ragged season, W. H. Yeckley managed to stand out despite the mediocre showing. He weighs 190 and stands six feet, one inch.

Francis (Fay) Vincent, Yale tackle, is somewhat smaller than most men in this position, but he's been playing a fine game. He weighs 184 and is six feet tall, having the "barrel type" build and hard to hurt.

Colgate has a pair of fine tackles in A. C. Schiebel, 215-pound six-footer, and Howard Crane, 220 pounds, six-foot-two giant.

Crehan of Dartmouth weighs 197 and stands six feet, is another fine tackle.

New York University has in Ernest Cannon, of Waltham, Mass., a might fine performer. He weighs 184 and is six feet tall.

This list would not be complete without the addition of the names of such fine tackles of the season as: Van Bibber of Purdue, Foley of Fordham, Bowstrom of Navy, Marvill of Northwestern, Maree of Georgia Tech, Cronkrite of Kansas Aggie, Draveling of Michigan, and Schwegler of Washington.

NEXT: Joe Bedenk of Penn State, All-American guard for Penn State, "Who's Who in 1930 Football" at the guard position.

CEDARVILLE LEADS AT HALF BUT LOSES SPRINGFIELD GAME

Doughman Leads In Wildcats' 36 to 15 Victory

Unable to hold a five-point lead gained in the first half, Cedarville High School was swamped by Springfield High School basketballers 36 to 15 at the latter school's gymnasium Friday night. Cedarville's margin at half-time was 12 to 7 but the Wildcats came into their own in the last two periods and Cedarville was held to three points while the Mansfield-coached team piled up twenty-nine. ## CEDARVILLE COLLEGE TO MEET XAVIER MUSKETEERS SATURDAY

Defeated by Rio Grande in its seasonal debut Cedarville College's basketball quintet will help Xavier College inaugurate its schedule Saturday night this week on the Xavier floor at Cincinnati, the sphere to be tossed up by Referee Charles Harrington at 8:30 o'clock. The Musketeer chances for a successful season have been lessened by the decision of Frank McDevitt and Joe Bartlett not to play basketball this season. McDevitt is expected to assist in coaching the freshman team at Xavier.

Jim Stout, captain of the team, who, during his high school days was regarded as a classy court performer in Queen City hardwood circles, will probably team with Bob Sack at forward stations, although another prospect Paul Hughes has been showing promise. Art Elbert and Dan Corbett have been having a lively battle for the center berth in practice. John Tracy, fully recovered from an operation, is available to play guard, a position he held down last season, while other promising guard candidates include Bernard Wilhelm, Gordon McNaughton, Charles Hope, Paul Kelley and Frank Mercurio.

Spring Hill grade teams won two games and tied another in the opening round of play in Intra-City Grade School Basketball League Saturday morning at Central High gymnasium.

The first game on the program between McKinley 4A and Spring Hill 4 resulted in a scoreless tie despite the fact a four-minute overtime period was played. The teams were so evenly matched neither could score a single point. Foley looked good for McKinley while Knisley and Leach showed up well for Spring Hill.

In the second game of the round Spring Hill fifth graders nosed out McKinley 5A by a score of 5 to 4, this contest also requiring an extra period. With the score deadlocked at 4 to 4 at the end of the regular playing period, Fuller, forward, made good a free throw in the overtime session which gave him a one-point victory. Doggett and Fuller starred for the winners and Huston was McKinley's main threat.

Led by Leach, who contributed three baskets, Spring Hill sixth grade defeated McKinley 6A by a 16 to 8 margin in the final game. Turner played a good floor game for the winners while Messenger and Cope were McKinley's shining lights.

McKinley 4B, 5B and 6B quintets drew byes the first round and will play their first games next Saturday morning.

N. Y. STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, Dec. 13.—A flood of selling orders for the principal industrial and utility stocks in the first hour today forced prices down another notch from Friday's closing levels. Many of the favorites dipped to the year's lowest prices. U. S. Steel leading the way with a 2-point drop to 137 1/2. Consolidated Gas and General Electric also sold at the bottom prices of the present move, as also did United Corporation, North American and other well-known utilities. New York Central led the rails to the lower levels.

Central Triumphs Over Waynesville High

BUCCANEERS WIN IN LAST MINUTES FROM SCRAPPY VISITORS

Locals Lack Polish; Dalton and Price Lead Scoring

By PHIL FRAME
XENIA Central High, which is undertaking one of the most pretentious basketball schedules in the school's history, opened its current hardwood season with an expected triumph over Waynesville High at the local gymnasium Friday night, but the margin of victory was only 24 to 19 as the scrappy little Warren County team proved a rather large order of chili sauce for a warm-up contest.

As is the case nine times out of ten in the seasonal debut of a basketball team, the Buccaneer basketball team, the polished style of play which is bound to come as the season progresses and their floor tactics were more reminiscent of football than basketball.

Even so, congratulations are in order that the Bucs played as well as they did, taking into consideration the fact Waynesville, having already played four games this season, and possessing a quintet far superior to that which faced Xenia in the 1929-30 inaugural game, displayed superior teamwork and had nearly twice as many shots at the basket, a large percentage of the attempts going astray.

The only points scored in the first quarter were due to a basket by Freddie Dalton, Buccaneer sophomore forward, the period ending 2 to 0 in Xenia's favor. In the second quarter Dalton contributed two more fielders and a free throw but actually was out-pointed by Thompson, a foul, the Buccaneer margin at half-time being 10 to 5 as Waynesville scored five points on two baskets by Ellis and a foul by Savage.

At the close of the third stanza Xenia's margin was 15 to 11, "Long" David Short, sophomore center prospect, accounting for four of the five Buccaneer points obtained in this chunker, while Price made a free throw. Waynesville boosted its total six points on another brace of fielders by the efficient Ellis and fouls by Miltenberger and Wallace.

Xenia outscored the visitors nine to eight in the last period but there was a time when Waynesville not only overcame the Buccaneer lead but actually was ahead by one point. Price started the period off with a close-in shot but the six-point margin evaporated as a result of two baskets by Turner, one by Mainous and a foul by Turner, changing the count to 18 to 17 in Waynesville's favor. Wallace fouled Thompson, however, while the latter was in the act of shooting and Howard, having made the basket under difficulties, added a foul. Dalton then contributed another free throw. Turner shot a foul but Price dribbled in for a "bunny" that made things safe and Thompson made another charity shot as the game ended.

Xenia recorded eight baskets, one more than Waynesville obtained, and converted eight out of sixteen lead but actually was aided by one point. ## Who's Who in 1930 Football Fay Vincent and Bob Hall Among Tackles Picked as Best by Weir

EDWARDS Washington State SINGTON Alabama HALL Southern California

MANY STAR TACKLES THIS YEAR GREAT NEBRASKA STAR FINDS

Sington Of Alabama, Rhea of Nebraska, Edwards Of Washington State, Among Linemen Favored By All-American

EDITOR'S NOTE: Ed Weir of Nebraska was one of the greatest tackles the mid-west has produced. He was All American in 1924 and 1925. Today he is assistant coach at the Cornukracker institution. In the accompanying articles, second of the "Who's Who in 1930 Football" series, Weir tells you about the great tackles of the season.

By ED WEIR
All-American Tackle—1924-1925
Written Exclusively for Central Press and The Gazette
In discussing this year's crop of tackles throughout the country, I have judged them by their ability to measure up to the requirements that go to make a man fitted for this position.

An outstanding tackle should be well proportioned physically, weighing close to 260 around six to 200 in height. Often when they are much bigger than this, they are generally not active enough on their feet and when they are much under this mark, often times they can't take the beatings that a tackle must take.

He must be grounded in the various types of offensive football because the tackle occupies the key position which most offenses are aimed at. They either try to go inside of him or outside.

He should be able to get down the field under punts with the ends as most teams plan to send three men down on the first count, and by "first count" I mean the tackle doesn't stay in the line to block, but goes down when the ball is snapped, and most teams send the best of the two tackles down with the ends. That means, of course, that he must have more than average speed. It's a large order, but there are some players who measure up to these standards this year, as there are every year.

The tackle usually finds two men "working on" him. The wingback and end are usually trying to block him out of the play. That means he must have big and active hands to ward off not only these two assigned to him, but also he must be able to wade into the interference and do as much as he can to pile it up and if possible, make the tackle.

Sington of Alabama
Alabama has a big boy, Freddie Sington, who has played a great role in that team's great season. Sington is a powerhouse in himself, not only stopping plays that come his way but managing to get around and haul down from behind some that are intended to go the other way.

Glenn Edwards, a Washington State junior, who weighs 215 and stands six-two, is another outstanding performer who added materially in the Cougar's Pacific coast championship.

Hugh Rhea, of Nebraska, is one of the mid-west's best. He stands six-one and weighs 216, and is fast on his feet. Rhea is the National A. U. junior champion shot putter and has gotten better than 50 feet in competition. Rhea never saw a football until he enrolled at the Husker school. He is playing his second year on the "varsity" and went great guns this season.

Milo Lubatovich has been one of the Wisconsin Badgers' best players throughout the season. He is a senior, weighs 216 and stands six-two. Wisconsin will miss him next year.

Robert Hall, a junior, has aided Coach Howard Jones mightily at University of Southern California. He's a 211-pounder.

John M. Price, Ft. Dodge, Ia., is one of Army's best. He weighs 220 and stands six-three. He's a junior.

Other Fine Tackles
Although Princeton had a ragged season, W. H. Yeckley managed to stand out despite the mediocre showing. He weighs 190 and stands six feet, one inch.

"BUDDY" ROGERS IS STRICKEN IN TOLEDO

TOLEDO, O., Dec. 13.—Charles "Buddy" Rogers, motion picture actor, was to undergo an operation in a hospital here today for acute appendicitis. He had been suffering sharp pains in his side for more than a week, it was learned. The seriousness of his condition was not known until yesterday, however.

Rogers was taken to the hospital two hours after his scheduled departure for Hollywood where he was to begin work on a new picture. He will probably be confined to the hospital here for a week, it was said.

JORETTA A LOVE STORY By EDNA ROBB WEBSTER Author of 'DAD'S GIRL' etc.

READ THIS FIRST: Joretta Dowling is the beautiful daughter of a wealthy merchant whose ambitious mother has influenced her engagement to a wealthy shipbuilder, Norman Williams. As time goes on, Joretta dislikes him more, but her mother rushes the wedding plans for the autumn. Joretta has fallen in love with Jim Norton, the chief engineer on her father's new yacht. She finds that he is a gentleman by birth and a mechanical genius. He confides to her that he is inventing a carburetor for gas engines. Meanwhile, her father is making mysterious trips with the yacht to a southern port, to look after a gold mine he has bought from three crooks. Finally, Joretta's love for Jim reaches a climax, but her mother will not listen to her plea for a postponement of her marriage to Norman. Scarcely knowing what she is doing, she goes to the yacht to see Jim, on the pretext of wanting to run the yacht, and it is then that they confess their love for each other. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

Of course, sweetheart, I know how it is. Why? I have a carbon copy of every word you have ever spoken to me, filed in my brain cells.

Joretta stood beside him, leaning against him and her hands on the wheel beside him. She knew she shouldn't be there—that is, conventionally speaking—and yet, her place was there, right beside him. And just this one golden hour was hers. What was one hour out of a whole lifetime to be with the one person in the world that you loved?

"Couldn't we guide beautifully together—always, Jim?" she whispered, close to his face, loving his nearness and living the minutes to the utmost.

"Could we? Well, rather! I couldn't take care of you very well now, dear. But perhaps you wouldn't mind until we—made good. Why? With you to work for, Honey, I'd succeed so much sooner. Do you think you could consider living very economically for awhile?"

"Could I? Well, rather," mimicking his words. "Oh, Jim, I could live anywhere, any way, with you, and it would be heaven. It isn't that, darling. Please believe me. Only dad and mother would never listen."

"They might listen to me. You'd let me try, wouldn't you? You wouldn't forfeit the chance of our happiness because you are so sure of what they wouldn't do?"

"Why—no—only you can't know. Jim dear, just what it means to them."

"Well, isn't your happiness of most importance?"

"That's it, exactly. You see, they are very sure that they know just what will bring me the most happiness. Don't you see that they would be very certain that I was plunging myself into perfect tragedy, if I married you?"

"I believe your mother took something of a chance when she married your father and came out here to this no man's land, according to the story I've heard."

"Exactly, again. And by her sacrifice she purchased my freedom, as it were, from poverty and care and drudgery, forever, she believes."

"But you have a right to live your own life," he insisted.

"Physically speaking, yes, but not mentally." Her tone was bitter, not brightened. "But darling, let's not use all this precious time arguing about them. I've already decided to make one more desperate attempt. But please let me manage it, Jim. Not knowing this camp of the enemy you're attacking, you had better not attempt it yet. You might just lose your position with dad. And if I started right out causing you trouble, I'd never forgive myself."

"But anything is worth risking to get you."

"I love you for saying that," she kissed him shyly, "but just the same, that would gain us nothing. Promise you will let me talk with dad and mother, first. You see, they wouldn't believe you if you told them that I love you."

"They will believe you, if you can manage to look like you do right now. I never knew before that the stars could shine when the sun did."

"What do you mean?"

"Your shiny eyes are like stars with the sunshine of your hair around them."

"It's because you love me, and I'm so happy," she sighed contently. "But aren't we awfully far out, dear?"

"Not so far. We've been going parallel with the shore, sparring for time. It's a crime I don't want to watch this wheel, but I don't want anyone to notice anything unusual. Besides, if I got Olson to come up here, we'd have to go below and probably have Uncle Charley with us there, too. It's more private right here and gives you a good excuse for being here. Now, tell me, you didn't come down to run the yacht, really? Look at me, honey-girl, why did you come?"

"To—see you—Jim," she said softly, meeting the gaze of his clear grey eyes.

"Why have you been staying away all these weeks? I've hoped you would come every day we were in."

"I know. And I've wanted to come every day. But I had decided it was more kind to stay away. You see, well, I thought you felt as I did and I knew it would do us no good—"

"Then why today?"

"Well, I just—couldn't stay away any longer. I think I almost came without knowing it. I—had to come to you," the last words were only a whisper.

"And don't you see, Jetty, that you could never marry Williams and stay away from me, forever?"

"It would be—horrible," she almost gasped. "But lots of women have been denied love."

"Not in this day, honey-girl. Women get what they want these days. Your parents are pretty old-fashioned to be dictating whom you should marry. And you're somewhat old-fashioned yourself, allowing them to rule you. Oh, darling, I'm not being critical. At her quick glance of surprise. "That's just one reason why I love you—one of a thousand reasons or so—your sweet wholesomeness in this generation of sophistication."

"Don't you think we'd better go back, Jim dear? I wish we needn't. I'd like to go on and on with you forever—but I must get back. Mother will worry. I was ill yesterday—that is, I pleaded illness just to stay home alone and think about you," she confessed.

"You didn't! Precious girl. Why! Jetty, we've got to make your family see this thing straight. It can't be any other way," confidently.

"I—hope not," but there was more despair than hope in her voice and heart.

"Don't be sad, sweetheart. We have only just found each other. There will be plenty of time later to worry about your parents. I'm going ashore now, dear. Here, I'll manage the wheel easily with one hand until we get pretty well in. Come closer so I can hold you. Kiss me... Kiss me, again, honey-girl... darling—" And the yesterday of creation, today of time and forever of eternity was as moments to them.

Joretta never knew how she reached home any more than she had been conscious of driving to the yacht club. After they had returned to the harbor, she had to humor Uncle Charley with a chat and they all commented on her handling of the Montezuma, while she and Jim exchanged intimate, loving glances. She wanted to get away from others so she could be alone with her thoughts of him. She seemed to move in a glorious world of her own, shining with light. The light of love in Jim's eyes. It caressed her and enfolded her, as his arms had done. She laughed a little to herself, remembering with what difficulty their loving had been accomplished.

Oh! she was glad, glad she had dared to go to him. That was right. For love, to seek love—either man or woman, in the complicated scheme of things, men couldn't always be the aggressors. And if a man loved a woman he would never resent her advances, nor think her bold to seek him out. Of course, if he didn't love her, he couldn't understand. Then she would have to bear the chagrin of his condemnation. But love was strong and endured all things, for love's sake.

Joretta felt as she had that other day when she had gone to the yacht and had a pleasant day with Jim Norton; only this day her emotions were amplified a hundred-fold, just as her pleasure in being with him had been. She felt his kisses, with a little chill of liquid fire in her veins. Felt the warmth of his embrace and the bounding of his heart against hers. He reminded her only of beautiful things—that made on ache with pleasure at beholding them. Oh, like—morning sunlight on trees and deep shadows on still water. Beauty and peace—and love.

In all the hours she had been with Norman, nothing had been like this. She knew now why she evaded Norman's caresses when possible, where love and gladness flourished, giving of herself and receiving, growing in strength and beauty. That would be life with Jim. What did she care for bijouterie and gold? There were those in the desert, too, and what good were they? Not even worth a drink of water!

When she arrived home, she entered the hall quietly and started up the stairs, hoping to reach her room undiscovered.

"Is that you, Jetty?" her mother called from the library, coming to the door.

"Oh, yes, mumsy."

Mrs. Dowling looked at her with astonishment. Was this the girl for whom she had been concerned only yesterday? "Why, Jetty dear, whatever has happened to you?"

"Oh—nothing, mumsy. Why? What is the matter?"

"Nothing at all. Only you are looking so—radiant today. You are feeling better?"

"To—see you—Jim," she said softly, meeting the gaze of his clear grey eyes.

"Why have you been staying away all these weeks? I've hoped you would come every day we were in."

"I know. And I've wanted to come every day. But I had decided it was more kind to stay away. You see, well, I thought you felt as I did and I knew it would do us no good—"

READ THIS FIRST: Joretta Dowling is the beautiful daughter of a wealthy merchant whose ambitious mother has influenced her engagement to a wealthy shipbuilder, Norman Williams. As time goes on, Joretta dislikes him more, but her mother rushes the wedding plans for the autumn. Joretta has fallen in love with Jim Norton, the chief engineer on her father's new yacht. She finds that he is a gentleman by birth and a mechanical genius. He confides to her that he is inventing a carburetor for gas engines. Meanwhile, her father is making mysterious trips with the yacht to a southern port, to look after a gold mine he has bought from three crooks. Finally, Joretta's love for Jim reaches a climax, but her mother will not listen to her plea for a postponement of her marriage to Norman. Scarcely knowing what she is doing, she goes to the yacht to see Jim, and the pretense of wanting to run the yacht, and it is then that they confess their love for each other. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY happiness because you are so sure of what you wouldn't do? "Why—no—only you can't know, Jim dear, just what it means to them." "Well, isn't your happiness of most importance?" "That's it, exactly. You see, they are very sure that they know just what will bring me the most happiness. Don't you see that they would be very certain that I was plunging myself into perfect tragedy, if I married you?" "I believe your mother thought something of a chance when she married your father and came out here to this no man's land, according to the story I've heard." "Exactly, again. And by her sacrifice she purchased my freedom, as it were, from poverty and care and drudgery, forever, she believes." "But you have a right to live your own life," he insisted. "Physically speaking, yes, but not mentally." Her tone was bitter then brightened. "But darling, let's not use all this precious time arguing about them. I've already decided to make one more desperate attempt. But please let me manage it, Jim. Not knowing this, camp of the enemy you're attacking, you had better not attempt it, yet. You might lose your position with dad. And if I started right out causing you trouble, I'd never forgive myself." "But anything is worth risking to get you." "I love you for saying that," she kissed him shyly, "but just the same, that would gain us nothing. Promise you will let me talk with dad and mother, first. You see, they wouldn't believe you if you told them that I love you." "They will believe you, if you can manage to look like you do right now. I never knew before that the stars could shine when the sun did." "What do you mean?" "Your shiny eyes are like stars with the sunshine of your hair around them." "It's because you love me, and I'm so happy," she sighed contently. "But aren't we awfully far out, dear?" "Not so far. We're being going parallel with the shore, sparring for time. It's a crime I have to watch this wheel, but I don't want anyone to notice anything unusual. Besides, if I got Olson to come up here, we'd have to go below and probably have Uncle Charley with us there, too. It's more private right here and gives you a good excuse for being here. Now, tell me, you didn't come down to run the yacht, really? Look at me, honey-girl, why did you come?" "To—see you—Jim," she said softly, meeting the gaze of his clear grey eyes. "Why have you been staying away all these weeks? I've hoped you would come every day we were in." "I know. And I've wanted to come every day. But I had decided it was more kind to stay away. You see, well, I thought you felt as I did and I knew it would do us no good." "Then why today?" "Well, I just—couldn't stay away any longer. I think I almost came without knowing it. I—had to come to you," the last words were only a whisper. "And don't you see, Jetty, that you could never marry Williams and stay away from me, forever?" "It would be—horrible," she almost gasped. "But lots of women have been denied love." "Not in this day, honey-girl. Women get what they want these days. Your parents are pretty old-fashioned to be dictating whom you should marry. And you're somewhat old-fashioned yourself, allowing them to rule you. Oh, darling, I'm not being critical, at her quick glance of surprise. "That's just one reason why I love you—one of a thousand reasons or so—your sweet wholesomeness in this generation of sophistication." "Don't you think we'd better go back, Jim dear? I wish we needn't. I'd like to go on and on with you forever—but I must get back. Mother will worry. I was ill yesterday—that is, I pleaded illness just to stay home alone and think about you," she confessed. "You didn't! Precious girl. Why? Jetty, we've got to make your family see this thing straight. It can't be any other way," confidently. "I—hope not," but there was more despair than hope in her voice and heart. "Don't be sad, sweetheart. We have only just found each other. There will be plenty of time later to worry about your parents. I'm going ashore now, dear. Here, I'll manage the wheel easily with one hand until we get pretty well in. Come closer so I can hold you. Kiss me. . . Kiss me, again, honey-girl. . . darling—" And the yesterday of creation, today of time and forever of eternity was as moments to them. Joretta never knew how she reached home any more than she had been conscious of driving to the yacht club. After they had returned to the harbor, she had to humor Uncle Charley with a chat and they all commented on her handling of the Montezuma, while she and Jim exchanged intimate, loving glances. She wanted to get away from others so she could be alone with her thoughts of him. She seemed to move in a glorious world of her own, shining with light. The light of love in Jim's eyes. It caressed her and enfolded her, as his arms had done. She laughed a little to herself, remembering with what difficulty their loving had been accomplished. Oh! she was glad, glad she had dared to go to him. That was right. For love to seek love—either man or woman. In the complicated scheme of things, men couldn't always be the aggressors. And if a man loved a woman he would never resent her advances, nor think her bold to seek him out. Or course, if he didn't love her, he couldn't understand. Then she would have to bear the chagrin of his condemnation. But she was strong and endured all things, for love's sake.

Joretta felt as she had that other day when she had gone to the yacht and had a pleasant day with Jim Norton; only this day her emotions were amplified a hundred-fold, just as her pleasure in being with him had been. She felt his kisses, with a little chill of liquid fire in her veins. Felt the warmth of his embrace and the pounding of his heart against hers. He reminded her only of beautiful things—that made on ache with pleasure at beholding them. Oh, like—morning sunlight on trees and deep shadows on still water. Beauty and peace—and love.

In all the hours she had been with Norman, nothing had been like this. She knew now why she evaded Norman's caresses when he would have her. His was a love that was not to be wasted, poured out like water into a desolate desert soil to sink depravely into greediness, scorching sand. She wanted to be carried joyously, like a deep river through fertile valleys and green meadows, where love and gladness flourished, giving of herself and receiving, growing in strength and beauty. That would be life with Jim. What did she care for bi-jouterie and gold? There were those in the desert, too, and what good were they? Not even worth a drink of water!

When she arrived home, she entered the hall quietly and started up the stairs, hoping to reach her room undiscovered.

"Is that you, Jetty?" her mother called from the library, coming to the door.

"Oh, yes, mumsy."

Mrs. Dowling looked at her with astonishment. Was this the girl for whom she had been concerned only yesterday? "Why, Jetty dear, whatever has happened to you?"

"Oh—nothing, mumsy. Why?"

What is the matter?"

"Nothing at all. Only you are looking so—radiant today. You are feeling better?"

"Much better, mumsy. Anyone call?" Any mail? crossing to the table where her mail was always left. "Oh, two letters—one from Thalia at Banff and Grace in Quebec. They had better start trailing home if they want to be in the fall," she stopped suddenly and her face paled. "Er—that is, if they want to be bridesmaids," she finished with an effort. "Any news?" absorbed with inserting a paper knife into the corner of the envelope.

"I had a bright idea. I'm having bags of gold tulle made for the white rose-lille confetti with which each guest will shower you as you leave. Everything gold and white—suits you perfectly. I am so glad you are feeling better. Your ride did you good. Where did you go?"

"Oh—over to the club and—then I took the Montezuma out for a little while. Just took a notion. And they let have the wheel, mother. It was ripping."

"Well—Joretta, I don't think you should go out like that—alone," hesitantly.

"Why I wasn't alone. Uncle Charley was there—and—the others. Most of the crew. Dad said I might take it any time."

"Well, of course, it's all right dear. I was just thinking—if anything had happened."

Joretta squirmed uneasily, sat up in her chair. Should she tell her mother now, what had happened, and get it over with? Should she?

Mr. Owens married Miss Anna L. Saylor, June 16, 1880, and they celebrated their golden wedding anniversary with a family gathering last June. Mr. Owens was a member of Trinity M. E. Church and of Xenia Lodge 49, F. and A. He spent all of his life in Xenia, with the exception of a year in 1916-17 in which the family lived in Dayton and he enjoyed the friendship of hundreds here.

Funeral services will be held at the home Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock in charge of the Rev. A. H. Beardsley, pastor of Trinity M. E. Church. Masons will conduct their ritual at the residence Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock and friends may call anytime after 3 o'clock. Burial will be made in Woodland cemetery.

Huesca, Madrid and Saragossa. The latter city is only about forty-five miles from Tardienta, where the rebel vanguard was reported entrenched, and approximately eighty miles south of Jaca. The three towns are connected by a railroad line.

In addition to troops, the military authorities ordered a number of airplanes into northern Spain to bomb the insurgents. King Alfonso hastily returned to the capital from his hunting trip on being informed of the northern eruption.

Color was given the accounts of rebel activity at Jaca when it was reported that one of the leaders defying the royal regime was none other than Major Ramon Franco, Spanish flying ace and popular idol who recently escaped from the military prison in Madrid where he was serving a ten-months sentence for publication of articles criticizing the government.

He has long been a thorn in the side of the administration, and was the object of a nationwide hunt immediately after his escape with a companion.

The outbreak occurred in one of Spain's most strategic military regions. Jaca, a town of about 13,000 population, is known as the "Verdun of Spain" because of its ring of forts, which guard all approach into Alfonso's country through the Pyrenees.

The rebels, according to first available information, took up arms at 2 p. m. yesterday afternoon, seizing the municipal authorities, foremost citizens and city hall. Then they occupied the principal railroad points in the vicinity.

After subduing minor forces of civil guards, it was reported, the rebels began a march toward Huesca, urging the population along the route to join the rebel movement.

Hildy Johnson, hero of "The Front Page," the sensational newspaper stage play that will be made into a film, probably will be played on the screen by Norman Foster, Broadway leading man.

Negotiations now are on for Howard Hughes to borrow the actor from Paramount, where he is under contract. Hughes, it will be remembered, is the young millionaire producer who spent four years and four millions making "Hell's Angels" and is criticized in some quarters for not being entirely orthodox in his selection of plays.

Foster is best known on the screen for his work in the title role of "Young Man of Manhat-

Front," will handle the megaphone. Louis Wolheim will be cast as the hard-bitten managing editor and Matt Moore is an inebriated reporter. So far it has not been learned whether Charley Ruggles, the screen's best tipsy scrivener, will have a part.

Charging desertion and alleging her husband Tom Mix, film cowboy, caused her great embarrassment by the "loud and boisterous" manner in which he conducted himself in cafes and other public places. Mrs. Victoria Mix has sued her husband for divorce in Los Angeles.

Last November, she complains, he pulled his "six gun," twirled it in the approved Wild West manner on his finger and told her he was going away for good. She seeks custody of Thomasin, their daughter. Mix is now in New York and is not expected in Hollywood before the first of the year. They were married in Riverside, Calif., in 1918.

MEET MRS. GLOBBY REYNOLDS OF HOLLYWOOD, CAL. OUR LATEST MEMBER.

The story has been in Hughes' possession for some time. Since the stage version was so successful dozens of similar plays have been produced. Some of them have painted a fairer picture of the press but for sheer intensity of melodrama and boisterous humor, none has surpassed "The Front Page."

Lewis Milestone, happily, director of "All Quiet on the Western front," playing opposite his wife, Claudette Colbert, also a Paramount star, in the Katherine Brush opus. If Hughes transfers "The Front Page" to the screen in such a manner that it passes the state censorship boards without losing any of its thrilling realism of the play, he may indeed be acclaimed as a producer-magician.

The stage play is best known, perhaps, for its colorful, picturesque or vulgar dialogue, according to your own view of such matters. The lines are spiced with profanity written into the piece by Ben Hecht and his collaborator to add to the naturalness of the scene in the press room of the Chicago Criminal Courts building, where all the action is laid. If anyone imagines a group of hard-boiled police reporters sitting around a press room playing tiddlywinks and talking sewing circle topics, he is badly fooled. The playwright might have copied down his dialogue for part of the play while fellow-reporters were being just fellow-reporters.

The story has been in Hughes' possession for some time. Since the stage version was so successful dozens of similar plays have been produced. Some of them have painted a fairer picture of the press but for sheer intensity of melodrama and boisterous humor, none has surpassed "The Front Page."

Lewis Milestone, happily, director of "All Quiet on the Western front," playing opposite his wife, Claudette Colbert, also a Paramount star, in the Katherine Brush opus. If Hughes transfers "The Front Page" to the screen in such a manner that it passes the state censorship boards without losing any of its thrilling realism of the play, he may indeed be acclaimed as a producer-magician.

The stage play is best known, perhaps, for its colorful, picturesque or vulgar dialogue, according to your own view of such matters. The lines are spiced with profanity written into the piece by Ben Hecht and his collaborator to add to the naturalness of the scene in the press room of the Chicago Criminal Courts building, where all the action is laid. If anyone imagines a group of hard-boiled police reporters sitting around a press room playing tiddlywinks and talking sewing circle topics, he is badly fooled. The playwright might have copied down his dialogue for part of the play while fellow-reporters were being just fellow-reporters.

Hildy Johnson, hero of "The Front Page," the sensational newspaper stage play that will be made into a film, probably will be played on the screen by Norman Foster, Broadway leading man.

Negotiations now are on for Howard Hughes to borrow the actor from Paramount, where he is under contract. Hughes, it will be remembered, is the young millionaire producer who spent four years and four millions making "Hell's Angels" and is criticized in some quarters for not being entirely orthodox in his selection of plays.

Foster is best known on the screen for his work in the title role of "Young Man of Manhat-

Front," will handle the megaphone. Louis Wolheim will be cast as the hard-bitten managing editor and Matt Moore as an inept reporter. So far it has not been learned whether Charley Ruggles, the screen's best tipsy scrivener, will have a part.

Charging desertion and alleging her husband Tom Mix, film cowboy, caused her great embarrassment by the "loud and boisterous" manner in which he conducted himself in cafes and other public places. Mrs. Victoria Mix has sued her husband for divorce in Los Angeles.

Last November, she complains, he pulled his "six-gun," twirled it in the approved Wild West manner on his finger and told her he was going away for good. She seeks custody of Thomas, their daughter. Mix is now in New York and is not expected in Hollywood before the first of the year. They were married in Riverside, Calif., in 1918.

REMEMBER the line in the lovable play, "Lightnin'," when Bill Jones received his pension-check from the Government? "See all them names on there—Secretary of the Treasury, Secretary of War, and so on? This check ain't any good unless I sign it!" said Bill with a air of importance.

And he was right. Without his little endorsement, the check was a mere scrap of paper.

The little things of life, as you have often heard, are tremendously important. The small advertisements in this paper have messages for you that are just as important as the messages in the larger advertisements. Read the small advertisements as well as the larger ones.

Not only the so-called "want" ads, but the little "display" ads. Read them. Let them guide you to real merchandise values, real savings. Don't overlook them because they are small. Without the tiny detonator, or fuse, the big guns that shoot a distance of miles become merely tons of useless steel.

Be sure to read the small ads as well as the larger ones. They have something important to tell you of which their size is no indication.

Lightnin' Bill Jones

REMEMBER the line in the lovable play, "Lightnin'," when Bill Jones received his pension-check from the Government? "See all them names on there—Secretary of the Treasury, Secretary of War, and so on? This check ain't any good unless I sign it!" said Bill with a air of importance.

And he was right. Without his little endorsement, the check was a mere scrap of paper.

The little things of life, as you have often heard, are tremendously important. The small advertisements in this paper have messages for you that are just as important as the messages in the larger advertisements. Read the small advertisements as well as the larger ones.

Not only the so-called "want" ads, but the little "display" ads. Read them. Let them guide you to real merchandise values, real savings. Don't overlook them because they are small. Without the tiny detonator, or fuse, the big guns that shoot a distance of miles become merely tons of useless steel.

Be sure to read the small ads as well as the larger ones. They have something important to tell you of which their size is no indication.
